Salvador Knives Into Honduras

Latin Mini-War Turning Savage

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Savage fighting and heavy casualties were reported Tuesday on the second day of Central American war between land-hungry El Salvador and the banana paradise of Honduras. Tanks were reported in action.

The Salvadorean military command announced its forces captured the village of Nacaome in a 45-mile-deep thrust into Honduran territory.

The Salvadoreans also reported the capture of the border town of Nueva Ocote-peque and the surrender of Honduran officers and men after "little resistance."

But a Honduran government announcement said the "struggle has been especially cruel" near Nueva Ocotepeque, with fighting continuing for seven hours at last report.

Honduran medical personnel reported casualties, both civilian and military, were heavy on both sides of the border.

Salvadorean government

sources said unofficially their army is marching in two columns into Honduras with the capital, Tegucigalpa, the objective.

San Salvador, the Salvadorean capital, was blacked out Tuesday night in anticipation of an air raid.

Climaxing years of glaring tensions — including a super-heated international soccer football rivalry — the war erupted Monday night when Honduras reported a deep stab into its territory from El Salvador, whose 3,000,000

"We are not unduly fatigued and we're ready to fly," Armstrong said earlier.

Armstrong and Aldrin spent some time Tuesday in a landing craft trainer before sitting down to a steak dinner.

THROGS WATCH

Hundreds of thousands of people jammed the area, including many who travelled thousands of miles. But if forecasts are correct, they may only see a few moments of history.

Weather predictions are "very favorable" for launch, Petrone said, but after Apollo 11's huge 263-foot-tall Saturn V rocket pierces expected cloud cover at 15,000 feet, "visibility may not be good," he warned.

MANY ELEMENTS

Mission director George Hage told a news conference that failure is always a possibility and people should be prepared for it.

"Anytime you have a space vehicle with many million parts, there are a lot of elements that have to work right," he said. "Nevertheless, project officials have done everything man can do to minimize the chance of failure."

PLAN REVIEWED

The astronauts spent most of Tuesday in crew quarters, reviewing the flight plan and conserving their strength for the demanding eight-day mission to and from the moon.

Aldrin set aside some time to increase his pilot proficiency in a lunar landing craft trainer, while Armstrong talked with his wife Janet.

'CONFIDENCE'

"Everything conceivable has been done to assure our safety," said Armstrong.

"We have high confidence. Otherwise we would not go."

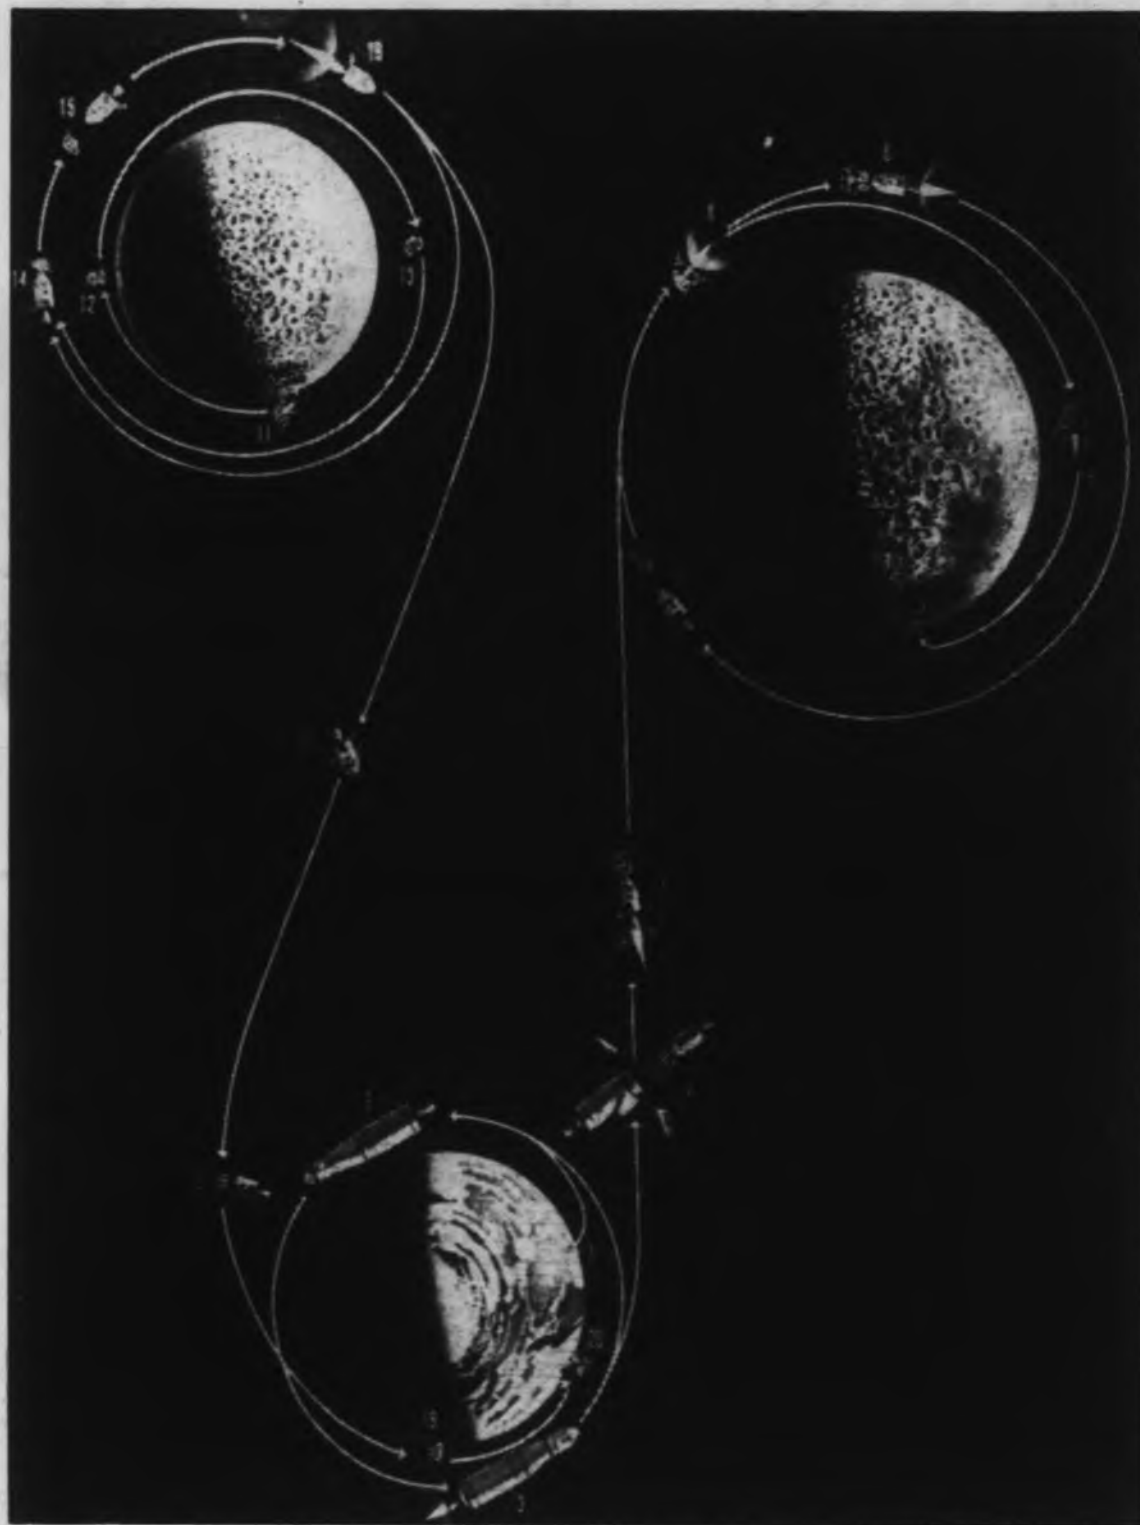

Nearly 1,000,000 persons are expected to witness the blastoff firsthand. They include current and former government leaders, officials from foreign lands, and poor people in mule-drawn wagons protesting that money for the $335,000,000 mission could be better spent helping them.

VIPS ARRIVE

Millions throughout the world will watch on television. Plane loads of VIPS began flying to the area Tuesday.

At the launch pad, crews installed batteries aboard Apollo 11's 36-story-tall Saturn V rocket.

CP Air Strike Set for Friday

VANCOUVER (CP) — The 1,000 machinists employed by CP Air have voted 92 per cent to reject a conciliation board report and a strike deadline of 11:30 a.m. PDT Friday has been set, union spokesman Pat O'Grady said Tuesday night.

He charged that CP Air was downgrading air safety by asking for "economy and efficiency of operation."

The union negotiating committee recommended rejection of the conciliation board report July 8. Union officials would not comment on the proposals in the report but the wage offer is believed to be the same accepted by Air Canada machinists after their strike—a 16 per cent boost over 26 months.

CP Air machinists began negotiating May 6 for a 20 per cent boost over one year.

Interest Jumps Again

OTTAWA (CP) — The bank rate has been increased to a record eight per cent effective today, Governor Louis St. Laurent said late Tuesday.

The rate has been raised twice earlier this year, the last time to 7½ per cent from seven on June 11.

He said in a prepared statement the increase is consistent with the desire of the central bank to moderate the expansion of bank credit but that the primary cause for the present action is the high level of external interest rates.

Trudeau Gives Farmers Small Comfort

From CP, UPI, AP

Fast-moving Prime minister Trudeau gave scant comfort to troubled Prairie wheat farmers Tuesday in several encounters during his fence-mending tour of the West.

For the farmers, complaining of slow wheat sales and low farm income, Trudeau had in essence one message:

"Your fight is not with me. I'm not trying to grind the farmer's face in the dust. You will have to face the hard realities of the world grain economy and produce less wheat if you want to find a market for it."

During Trudeau's visit to the Canadian wheat board building in Winnipeg, Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, also on hand, was asked if Trudeau would be discussing the farm income crisis in Western Canada with board officials.

Said Pepin: "The wheat board is not in that business — it is in the business of selling wheat. The wheat market situation is one problem and the farmers' income is another."

Asked to comment on a Washington report earlier in the day that the United States plans to drop its wheat prices below the International Grains Arrangement floor, Pepin said he understood the report was from a department source.

"It is not the official American position."

In the lobby of the building, Trudeau came face to face with Ken Singleton and John Palamarchuk, president and vice-president of the Manitoba Farmers' Union.

Trudeau rejected Singleton's suggestion that the government declare a moratorium on the debts of western farmers, and indicated he did not think much of Palamarchuk's suggestion that the farmers themselves take over operation of the wheat board.

During his Winnipeg visit, Trudeau also had a half-hour meeting with Manitoba's new New Democratic premier, Ed Schreyer.

Schreyer later told a press conference the two had discussed farm cash income, northern development, the port of Churchill, the Official Languages Act and constitutional review.

It was during a stop at Gimli, 60 miles north of Winnipeg, that Trudeau reminded farmers of the "hard realities."

"There's too much wheat for the demand," he said. "It's a mistake to think we can sell all the wheat we can produce. I know of no way except that the west will eventually have to grow less wheat. There is a very serious future."

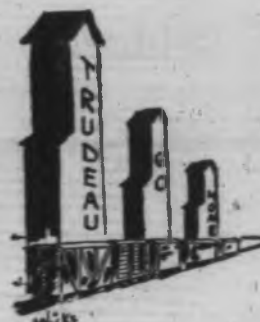

From Gimli Trudeau took a helicopter to Beausejour, east

Honestly...

LET'S BE OPINIONATED...

BE HONEST now, were you really surprised by Phil Gaglardi's "look" statement re his new hard-core jobless employment offices? You shouldn't have been if you'd taken the time to read Gaglardi's past track record of foot in mouth disease. Flying Phil may have been an asset to Premier Bennett in some ways, but he's been a millstone around WAC's neck on enough occasions to warrant banishment to Nigeli Island. Now all I have to worry about is Nigeli Islanders taking umbrage at such a suggestion...

WHY pass a law if there is no intention of living up to all clauses of that law? Why did our federal government go through the long-winded capital punishment debate? Why did they abolish capital punishment for all but specified crimes if they did not intend carrying out that law? Kill a police officer and/or prison guard and it's murder one worth the electric chair or hangman's noose upon conviction. That's what the law says, but Leonard Borg wants a Mountie and his sentence is commuted to life. Which means he is eligible for parole in 10 years. If this section of the law was meant to protect police officers and guards, then that protection went out the window when Borg's sentence was commuted...

I SUGGEST to supermarket managers that express lane service (eight items or less) isn't express if it isn't fast and it isn't fast if the cashier also has to act as the wrapper. This is especially noticeable when the lineup is long near closing time. In other words, put the express back in express...

I APPRAISED Scott Wallace's decision to try for the Sacred nomination in the Oak Bay constituency. The diminutive doctor has clearly demonstrated his worth as an alderman in Oak Bay and while he shies at some of the petty bickering in council, he is nevertheless a thorough, dogmatic worker. He is the type of man we need in provincial politics and I only wish there were more of his brand around to carry on the fight. Too often, men of his calibre do not choose to enter the cockpit arena of politics. We get too many rubber stamps who are afraid to rock the boat, so when a Scott Wallace comes along I say we're getting a plus...

A CHEER or two for Hugh Curtis for telling Saanich not to bother outfitting him in the traditional ceremonial robes of the mayor's office. This is the type of unnecessary frill that merely adds more dollars to already unenviable government costs. I'll wager a farthing or two that literally thousands of dollars could be saved by weeding out other surfeit items in government spending. You know of any, pass them along to me...

ISN'T all the talk about founding fathers of Canada just so much bludge when you consider it all happened so long ago? Really, who gives a damn today? Certainly not the Ukrainians, the Italians, the Germans, the Swedes, the Russians and all the OTHER nationalities that make up a great piece of our population today...

ISN'T one of the inequities of our law the allowing of a bankrupt (if he has discharged his bankruptcy at maybe 20 or 30 cents on the dollar) to go back into the same business again? It means many people are left holding the financial bag while he takes another shot at making it big. A good example of the law protecting the individual at the expense of the majority...

WHEN will the four major municipalities of our tight little island do away with the waste and inefficiency of separate management in favor of amalgamation? The regional board concept has failed miserably in many areas (pollution control, equality of taxation, etc.) which makes it almost a must that we have one STRONG city voice rather than the disharmonious squabbles we now get from four incoherent little empires...

Hypnosis by Amateurs Risky

By G. T. THOMPSON, MD

Dear Dr. Thompson: Is it possible that hypnotic suggestion could have any effective result in helping a heavy smoker to cut down or stop entirely?

C.H.I.

I suppose it could — but I will appeal the comment that I insist upon attaching to any mention of hypnosis. It should be employed only by someone who understands intimately the dangers that can be present.

Hypnosis is not difficult to learn. Learning what can happen, and what to do about it if something goes wrong, is quite another matter. Psychiatric records are full of cases of amateur or thinly-trained hypnotists putting people into trances from which they could not be waked, or having hypnosis cause some "substitute" much more dangerous trait. Some cases — and I am speaking factually and not exaggerating in the least — have led to suicide.

I repeat: If you are going to try hypnosis, do so only in the care of a physician trained in this technique, and preferably a psychiatrist. Everybody (for so it seems, these days) is touting about the possible "side effects" of drugs. Well, hypnosis has side effects, too.

Dear Dr. Thompson: I have twins, a boy and girl, aged 3. The little girl's left eye is slightly crossed. It is not later on.

noticeable all the time. I've noticed that when they are looking at picture books, she always has them upside down. The little boy doesn't do this. Could you explain why she does this? Does she really see things upside down? — Mrs. W.

Without knowing more, I can't even give you an educated guess as to exactly why she turns the books upside down. But this I can tell you: the little girl clearly has an eye defect and you should have an eye specialist examine her without delay. These eyes which are "slightly crossed" should be examined and evaluated just as soon as possible, since, if the trouble is allowed to continue, it may be more difficult to correct later on.

For Scoop?

Slower Luna Loaded

JODRELL BANK, England (AP) — The Soviet unmanned Luna 15 is on a slower pace to the moon than its predecessors, indicating it is heavier and carries new equipment for a special mission, Britain's foremost space expert said Tuesday.

Sir Bernard Lovell, director of Jodrell Bank Observatory, reported the flight "indicates that a new form of operation is intended."

"It supports the theory that Luna 15 may attempt to recover lunar rock."

Sources in Moscow have been speculating that the Luna 15 will land a capsule that may scoop up lunar soil and rocket back to earth. Unofficial Soviet sources in Moscow said Tuesday Luna 15 is equipped with a television camera for an attempt to broadcast pictures from the moon's surface. They added that it had four mechanical legs that might be used to move across the surface. There was no official confirmation.

Official sources in Moscow have been silent since announcing that Luna was launched Sunday.

Troubles Grow For Ra

From Reuters — AP

SAN JUAN — The United States Coast Guard in Puerto Rico intercepted distress signals Tuesday from Norwegian explorer Thor Heyerdahl's pyramidal Ra, crossing the Atlantic.

The Ra, some 600 miles east of Barbados, called on ships in the area to stand by to answer any SOS signals, the coast guard said. The message said the raft's yardarm was broken, but there was no immediate need for alarm.

Heyerdahl and his six-man crew are already worried about the stern of the Ra which has been swamped by heavy seas. They planned to patch up the sudden rear with bundles of papyrus from the raft's high prow.

The crew will try to fix the broken yard arm without any help, the coast guard said.

The Ra left Safi, Morocco May 25 to sail to the West Indies.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) —

The Tennessee Court of Criminal Appeals refused Tuesday to review a decision by a Memphis judge of a new murder trial for James Earl Ray in the slaying of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Presiding Judge Mark A. Walker announced the court's decision after it had deliberated the matter less than four hours.

Riots Spread Into Belfast

BELFAST (UPI) — Catholic-Protestant rioting spread into this capital of Northern Ireland Tuesday. The government mobilized police reservists to help curb the worst outbreak of violence here since the start of religious civil rights strife last October.

Success on Apollo 11 would prove the moon is an accessible frontier for scientific exploration, answer numerous scientific questions including perhaps whether life exists away from earth, and gain incalculable political prestige for the United States for winning the moon race.

An unmanned Soviet spacecraft, Luna 15, continued cruising toward the moon, possibly intent on scooping up a sample of moon rock and bringing it to earth before Apollo 11. Luna 15 was expected to arrive at the moon Thursday.

Failure of Apollo 11 would delay a manned lunar landing by the U.S. until at least September—the soonest another Saturn-Apollo moonship could be prepared. It also would mean another astronaut crew, headed by Apollo 12 commander Charles Conrad, would get the honors.

If all goes well, Apollo 11 will swing into orbit around the moon Saturday. On Sunday, Armstrong and Aldrin will crawl into a lunar module—called the LM—landing craft hooked to the command ship's nose and land on a plain in the Moon's Sea of Tranquility at 4:19 p.m.

Collins will be left behind to take care of the command ship and serve as life guard in case trouble develops with the LM.

Youth Killed

SQUAMISH (CP) — Allan Gregory Crosson, 17, of Squamish was killed Tuesday when he was pinned between two trees in a logging accident 43 miles north of here.

While the two craft are separated, the command ship will have the radio call name Columbia, named after the U.S. national symbol, a statue of which stands atop the Capitol in Washington. The LM will be referred to as Eagle.

Forgiveness Sought For Order to Kill

MUNICH (Reuters) — A German Roman Catholic bishop who passed on an order for the wartime execution of 17 Italian villagers asked the villagers Monday for forgiveness and understanding. In a letter circulated by the Munich archdiocese to its priests and parishes, suffragan Bishop Matthias Dreier, 53, of Munich said: "That which all the world now knows has been a heavy burden in my life for the last 25 years."

The weekly news magazine Der Spiegel said last week the bishop was an army captain when he accepted and passed on an order in 1944 to kill the male population of Fieschi di Camarada, 63 miles north of Rome. The order was issued as a reprisal for the killing of a German soldier by Italian partisans, Der Spiegel said.

El Salvador announced Tuesday it was suspending all military air activity pending the arrival from Washington of a peace team of the OAS.

Several suburban areas of Tegucigalpa were damaged by machine-gun fire Monday night, Hondurans said. The Mexican embassy was reported hit.

A Red Cross official in Managua, Nicaragua, said 500 refugees of various nationalities fled into Nicaragua from neighboring Honduras.

At the United Nations in New York, the Salvadoran ambassador said his government hoped the OAS would find a solution to the conflict without the necessity of taking it before the UN Security Council.

The Honduran government, in a note to Secretary-General U Thant, charged the Salvadoran attack was premeditated. It said El Salvador for several years had been building military installations near the border and acquiring excess military equipment.

Reuters news agency quoted diplomatic sources in Washington as saying that Honduras indicated it would accept an indefinite ceasefire if El Salvador would do so too.

A government broadcast from San Salvador said its forces had been ordered into action after "continuous attacks by Honduran troops on the Salvadoran frontier, violation of air space and the knowledge that Honduran troops and air force personnel had mobilized in Santa Rosa de Lima for a large-scale attack."

A seven-nation OAS team left Washington Tuesday morning for Guatemala. It was to depart for the scene of the conflict later in the day.

of Winnipeg, where he sat in a rocking chair in a farm living room and discussed subsidies with dairy farmers.

He was obviously starting from scratch in this field, because in the cow barn he had to ask how many times a day cows are milked.

In Ottawa meanwhile, with international minimum wheat prices temporarily suspended, the opposition tried Tuesday to have the Commons adjourn regular business for a special debate on the problem, and also to have it referred to the Commons agriculture committee.

They were unsuccessful on both counts — a fact which Opposition Leader Robert Stamfield said later was "disgraceful."

Even as all this went on, Australian Trade Minister John McEwan, back in Sydney from a meeting of the International Grains Arrangement in Washington, was saying:

"I believe that once the United States and Canada catch up on their wheat sales, they will realize the Soviet Union countries — not Australia — are their main competitors, and forget about us (Australia) altogether."

When Trudeau heads into Saskatchewan on his Prairie tour he will find more farmers already busy and actively protesting the farm income problem.

Across the province 5,000 tractors are crawling along highways, driven in shifts by 2,500 farmers, to register their complaint against declining wheat sales and under-cut wheat prices.

Near Prince Albert Tuesday a number were given tickets by RCMP officers for obstructing traffic, but the tickets were later withdrawn.

Israelis Cautioned Against Losing Control of Strait

From UPI

Israeli Defence Minister Moshe Dayan said Tuesday Israel would not surrender the Sinai peninsula fortress of Sharm El Sheikh which commands the entrance to the Red Sea and Israel's southern port of Eilat.

Dayan addressed the Knesset (parliament) in Jerusalem as Arab and Israeli spokesmen reported air raids, scattered gun duels, clashes and other incidents across both sides of the cease fire lines.

The toll of Arab and Israeli dead and wounded mounted even as the U.S. and Soviet Union were making new efforts to find a peaceful solution to the crisis in the Middle East.

Israel's foreign minister and the United Nations' special peace envoy also discussed the situation.

FORCES NOT TRUSTED.

Dayan told the Israeli deputies: "If we do not want another war, we should not trust either Egyptian or United Nations forces stationed at Sharm El Sheikh, or international guarantees on freedom of navigation through the strait of Tiran."

"This is precisely the situation that prevailed there before the June, 1967, six-day war."

A Jordanian spokesman said six Israeli warplanes carried out a 70-minute rocket attack on the Zahret Al-Najjar and Makhar Al-Najjar areas in the Jordan valley in the late afternoon. He said there were no Jordanian casualties.

Mad Dog Is Dead! Scots Mob Screams

GLASGOW, Scotland (UPI) — A murder suspect running from police and howling threats at passersby wounded 14 persons with shotgun and rifle blasts Tuesday and then died, possibly of a gunshot wound, in a tenement where police cornered him.

A mob screamed his epitaph — "The mad dog is dead!" — in the industrial suburb street where the two-hour shooting spree ended after a chase across Glasgow by foot, stolen car and stolen truck.

Det. Chief Supt. Tom Goodall said police found the man lying on the floor of the tenement. He had been shot. He died a few minutes later.

POST MORTEM AWAITED

"I am unable to say exactly how this man died (or whether police shot him) and we will have to await the result of the post mortem," Goodall said.

The long-haired gunman was identified only as a 34-year-old Englishman suspected of having robbed and beaten an elderly couple last month in Ayr, 40 miles south of here. The woman later died.

The drama began shortly before noon Tuesday when a team of the Scottish regional crime squad came to arrest the man in a grimy Victorian tenement on Holyrood Crescent, in a west side Glasgow slum district.

ROAR OF RAGE

He greeted them with a roar of rage and a shotgun blast. The police scrambled for cover.

"Then I saw the curtains in a big room in this house move and a gunman appeared," recalled Mrs. Mina Skea, who was chatting in Holyrood Crescent at the time with a neighbor, a Mrs. McKinnon.

"I took to my heels — I with a shotgun and started shooting at me and my friend." Gunfire knocked down a small boy. An elderly man hobbling along with a cane, and a young elevator operator trying to assist a policeman pinned down by gunfire, were hit.

Police caught up with the gunman in Kay Street in the northwest industrial suburbs. Police said they heard a shot from an attic apartment as they arrived, then silence. A policeman broke into the apartment and signalled from a window.

Below, the crowd roared its approval.

Policeman Killed In Ohio Shootout

VAN WERT, Ohio (UPI) — One policeman was killed and four others wounded Tuesday night when a resident of this northwest Ohio community went on a shooting rampage.

Police chief N. L. Kennedy said the assailant was "dropped with a load of buckshot" during a shootout at the Van Wert county jail.

A suspect, Jerry Hill, was taken to a hospital at nearby Lima under police guard.

PATROLMAN STABBED

Kennedy said the assailant went to the city jail, stabbed patrolman Ron Trewn in the back and shot him through the foot for no apparent reason.

Trewn was hospitalized in fair condition at Van Wert county hospital.

The attacker then walked to the nearby county jail and shot and killed special duty policeman Allen Jackson, Kennedy said.

He then shot Sgt. Arthur Grove through the chest, Sheriff Don Thomas through the arm and Deputy Larry Foster in the leg. All three were listed in fair condition at the county hospital.

PRISONERS RELEASED

The assailant released the "less than 10" prisoners at the jail, police said, and one of the inmates ran to a phone and called authorities.

City police rushed to the jail and Hill was wounded in the ensuing shootout. The released prisoners returned to custody voluntarily after the incident, police said.

Van Wert, the county seat with about 12,000 residents, is located about 75 miles southwest of Toledo.

Manx Ban Frankfurter For Mini-Skirt Slapping

DOUGLAS, Isle of Man (UPI) — A Manx court Tuesday banned German Gunther Lothar Heinz Squar from the island for three years because he liked to slap the bottoms of girls in mini skirts.

"I only go after ones with short skirts. I spanked one on the bottom because she had a short skirt on," said Squar, 47, of Frankfurt.

A policeman said Squar slapped an 18-year-old girl from Manchester, England, on the bottom in a crowded shopping centre Saturday. He later followed her for a mile, then indecently assaulted her.

Squar also indecently assaulted a 15-year-old girl, the policeman testified.

"I did it to create some excitement and some fun. In Germany the girls don't move round so freely as they do here," he said in an apology to the court.

Table-Thumping Tirade

SAIGON (Reuters) — Vice-

suggested Saigon might withdraw from the Paris peace talks and charged some United States politicians want to retain power by selling out to the Communists.

In a table-thumping speech to officer cadets at the National Defence College, Ky thundered against American influence.

"Their money does not make me or my people bow before them," he said. "Their money does not make me or my people listen to them or be afraid of them."

LESS INFLUENTIAL

Ky, former president, was once a power in Saigon. But he now is considerably less influential than his old rival, President Nguyen Van Thieu.

The peppy former fighter pilot said if the Viet Cong rejects Thieu's offer of participation in internationally-supervised elections, Saigon should quit the Paris peace talks.

Ky said it appears the Communists already rejected the offer and said: "I think there is no point in us prolonging and dragging on the Paris peace talks forever. There is nothing left but to carry on fighting."

Ky indicated he had little faith that the Americans will provide adequate backing for South Vietnamese forces.

"Even if we were to pull them back by their shirt-tails the Americans would never stay with us now," he said.

Thieu's invitation to the Viet Cong has been informally rejected by both North Vietnam and the Viet Cong's National Liberation Front. The offer will not be formally made in Paris until Thursday.

TRAINING SLOW

Attacking U.S. conduct of the war, Ky charged American forces were taking too long to train South Vietnamese troops.

He said he regretted that American and South Vietnamese forces had not been used in Cambodia and Laos to cut infiltration routes.

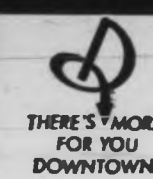

And he repeated his oft-stated conviction that U.S. planes should have bombed Hanoi and the major port of Haiphong.

Ky accused Americans of sabotaging the war effort.

Convoy Hit

SAIGON (UPI) — North Vietnamese troops firing rocket-propelled grenades ambushed a U.S. Army convoy on a jungle road 65 miles northeast of Saigon killing one American and wounding six, military spokesmen said Wednesday.

The North Vietnamese ambush was the only ground action reported Wednesday in morning communiques involving American forces as a lull in fighting continued into its fourth week.

Black Panther Fugitive

Cleaver Found in Algeria

ALGIERS (UPI) — Black power leader Eldridge Cleaver turned up in Algeria Tuesday to take part in the first festival of Pan-African culture.

Cleaver, the "minister of information" of the American Black Panther movement, has been sought by the Los Angeles police for the past year for his part in alleged crimes by the Black Panther movement.

Cleaver did not say where he had been for the past eight months but it was believed he had been in Cuba.

He told newsmen on his arrival: "At the moment when I am hunted by American imperialism, by the so-called leaders of the free world, I am happy to be invited by the government and the people of Algeria fighting to assist at the Pan-African cultural festival."

He said the American government "has launched a pernicious campaign to suppress the Black Panther movement and to exterminate its leaders."

Cleaver, accompanied by his wife, said the festival "marked an historic date for the unity of our fight, for the liberation of our people from the cultural forms imposed by the western imperialists."

"He said the festival represented "the coming together of all Africa and the people of African descent, not on the basis of their color but because of their common past, the common experience and their common fight."

The festival will be attended by several American Black Power advocates including Stokely Carmichael, one of the first of the Black Power leaders to gain world prominence.

Canadian in Nigeria

Starvation Quote Denied

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp denied Tuesday that Canada's senior military observer in Nigeria had said starvation is a legitimate weapon of war.

The remark was attributed to Brig-Gen. Charles Hamilton, the observer, as a result of an interview, Sharp said.

The external affairs minister said Gen. Hamilton was asked his views about starvation, a tactic said to be in use by Nigeria against breakaway Biafra, and "he replied that he had nothing to say about it."

David Lewis (NDP-York South) asked that the record of the interview be tabled in the Commons and Sharp agreed to do this.

Opposition Leader Robert

Stanfield asked whether Canada has protested to Nigeria.

Sharp said he didn't know Nigeria was involved. He thought the matter arose from an interview.

Lorne Nystrom (NDP-Yorkton-Melville) raised the matter, asking whether it had been investigated.

"I can deny he said the things he is accused of," Sharp replied.

Control in the North

WHEN THE 115,000-ton U.S. tanker Manhattan tries to navigate the Northwest Passage this summer to show that oil from the rich Prudhoe Bay field in Alaska can be transported by sea to Atlantic markets, it will do so with the full cooperation of the Canadian government.

The oil companies sponsoring the experiment and the U.S. Coast Guard consulted Canadian authorities in planning it; the Canadian Coast Guard icebreaker John A. Macdonald as well as an American icebreaker will accompany the Manhattan, and Canada will provide aerial ice reconnaissance. This is all as it should be and there is no reason to argue with Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau when he says he sees nothing wrong with this chiefly American attempt to establish an Arctic route.

But there would be nothing wrong either about making much more strongly evident than Mr. Trudeau so far has done that Canada regards the waters through which the Manhattan will be plowing, through the Arctic archipelago, as Canadian.

Here the danger is that by giving an inch, Canada could eventually lose a mile. And giving an inch is what the prime minister already, at least in appearance, has done.

When Mr. Trudeau stated in the Commons in May his government's policy on Canadian rights in the Arctic, he was firm in his assertion of Canada's sovereignty over the Arctic islands and over the continental shelf. But he seemed to back away from a previous Canadian position that the waters between the islands are Canadian.

"It is . . . known that not all countries would accept the view that the waters between the islands of the archipelago are internal waters over which Canada has full sovereignty. The contrary view is indeed that Canada's sovereignty extends only to the territorial sea around each island. The law of the sea is a complex subject which, as can be understood, may give rise to differences of opinion. Such differences, of course, would have to be settled not on an arbitrary basis but with due regard for established principles of international law."

At the time, the Opposition noted that the principles of international law are not always clear, and suggested that the government should vigorously assert Canada's claim to the Arctic waters and let any other country dispute it if it wanted, thus avoiding the appearance that Canada might be willing to compromise on northern control. It was—and is—good advice.

They Are Afraid

THE TERROR TACTICS of the Communist Viet Cong are nothing new to the villagers of South Vietnam. They have been subjected to this brutal subjugation ever since the division of the country. Their tormentors seek to rule by fear. Political persuasion would require time and patience; and these would-be rulers of Vietnam cannot afford to squander. It is simpler to kill, and by killing to engender the fear and panic that overwhelm reason and hope, and, finally, resistance.

That has been the pattern of Viet Cong behavior in the Kontum region, a mountainous area bordering on both Laos and Cambodia, since February, where the Communists are trying to control 10,000 stubborn tribespeople.

Neutral observers have described the first phase of the attack, planned to throw the villagers into confusion by destroying their leadership. The Viet Cong came with lists of nearly 200 names condemned to execution, but in the pursuit of their victims there was indiscriminate massacre in the bunkers where villagers had taken refuge.

Second stage of the campaign was to have been a period of reconciliation, indoctrination and reorganization of the villagers. But the plan was thwarted because the people tricked away. They abandoned their homes and hid themselves, and when they were discovered they moved on again.

Ultimately more than 2,500 of them have sought sanctuary with a Roman Catholic mission near Kontum, where, with South Vietnamese troops in the vicinity, they are relatively safe.

It can be assumed that these people have little faith in the Viet Cong as acceptable political masters. It might be assumed they hate the Communists as much as they fear them.

Their experience, and that of so many others, in the cities as well as in the villages of the countryside, may have taught them that terrorism only succeeds with a people in inescapable constraint. They may have decided that the alternative to the acceptance of communism offers a greater security. They are not likely to think in terms of freedom and democratic rights but of the simpler things, like food and shelter and the preservation of their precarious lives.

And the Communist Viet Cong, because they are not stupid, are undoubtedly aware of this possibility, and the very certain risk that in a free election in the country the people they have terrorized would turn against them.

This is at least one reasonable explanation why the Viet Cong and the master strategists in Hanoi have refused to consider President Nguyen Van Thieu's plan for a supervised free election in which all parties could participate, calling the suggestion a "perfidious manoeuvre."

They are afraid of the outcome.

Castle in the Air

The MP as Public Watchdog

Parliament Is Full of Ombudsmen

By HEWARD GRAFFETY

MANY legislatures throughout the world have been and are still considering the appointment of an ombudsman. Some, like Sweden, and the province of Alberta, already have done so. Governments and bureaucracies have grown bigger and bigger year after year. The result is that there is a growing suspicion, often well founded, that large impersonal government tramples on individual rights and freedoms. Canada is no exception. From time to time individual citizens, members of Parliament and various associations have called for just such a "public watchdog" — an officer to receive and investigate complaints from citizens against unfair administrative action.

Invariably basic individual rights have been withheld because an otherwise excellent official has knowingly or unwittingly exercised discretion which was not his or failed to exercise discretion which was his. The best drafted legislation often leaves glaring loopholes whereby the individual citizen is left hopelessly unprotected.

There is a large body of opinion in Canada that feels an ombudsman is a "must." The sentiments which prompt the enquiries for such an appointment are praiseworthy and more than understandable. Yet the question must be seriously asked: Is it an ombudsman that we need now?

In 1964 — during the second session of the 26th Parliament — an act "to establish the office of parliamentary commissioner" was placed before the House.

Under the heading, Function and Duties, the proposed act reads: "It is the function and duty of the parliamentary commissioner to investigate the administration, by a power or authority or officer of such power or authority, of any law in Canada whereby any person is aggrieved or in the opinion of the parliamentary commissioner, may be aggrieved."

My own approach may sound simplistic to some — but surely the above job description for such an officer must be considered to constitute one of the main functions of an alert and active member of Parliament. When I was member of Parliament for Bruden-Mississippi amongst other things, I considered myself to be the ombudsman for all my constituents. They could phone, visit or write me. I, in turn, could contact the official involved to make sure individual rights were being protected under the law. If I was dissatisfied, the minister in question, Parliament and a free press always seemed to me to be logical courts of appeal.

Understanding individual cases and working with "people" day after day is the best apprenticeship for members of Parliament who really want to know government and will have anything significant or worthwhile to contribute to drafting of practical and sensible laws.

It is argued that an ombudsman soon detects that a particular grievance is not only affecting one citizen, but "many" all over the land, and only he could uncover such universal injustice. Believe me, if such is the case members of Parliament in caucus or in Parliament some jump on the matter. Surely it is one of the primary functions of a good MP to breathe humanity into the impersonal framework of government. If he fails at this task, an enlightened electorate, not totally caught up in the momentary and heady stuff made up of the cult of leadership, can send the recalcitrant MP to his well earned retirement.

In Canada, the auditor general is an officer of Parliament. He ferrets out and detects irregularities in past government expenditures. I rather feel — he would be the first to admit that, within the Canadian context — governments have tended to ignore or question the majority of his findings.

I well remember the government had a policy to encourage employment for workers over 45 years of age. A plumber visited my office and showed me a letter from the Penitentiary Commission, refusing him work as a maintenance plumber at a penal institution because he was over 45. This regulation, for obvious reasons, was only meant to apply to guards, but was inadvertently being applied to all employment prospects. After much effort — including prodding the ministers responsible in the House — the matter was cleared up.

Being for an ombudsman often sounds to me like being for "motherhood." Examining their functions in Denmark, Sweden, Finland and New Zealand, I am convinced they are doing there what members of Parliament should and often do here. Speeches and petitions advocating a Canadian counterpart invariably make thin reading when it comes to discussing the basic principle of the office. Mr. Alfred Benelius, the Swedish ombudsman, addressing The Bar Association of the City of New York in February 1966 outlined a number of his functions. His speech sounded like the sort of thing we should hear from an MP. He claimed one of his functions was "many times every year, to petition the government for amendments to the law."

In Canada, Donald C. Rowat, professor of political science, Carleton University, Ottawa, has done much excellent and valuable work on the subject.

A strong advocate for the appointment of such an officer, he points out members of Parliament are understaffed and cannot keep on top of their work; larger and larger government means more and more administrative tribunals making decisions affecting individual rights, where "the rule of law" is not adhered to, and finally, government backslapping out.

Much of what he says is true, but I am optimistic and believe that individual members are much more ready to speak out than is commonly believed. Before we appoint an ombudsman, individual members should get more staff and help, as do U.S. congressmen. Better staffed and more powerful parliamentary committees are the next requirement. The readily available right of appeal from the decision of administrative tribunals to judicial or quasi-judicial bodies, basing decisions on "the rule of law," is an obvious must. When all these things are done, we might investigate the advisability of appointing an ombudsman. Until then, we have 264 ombudsmen, in the highest forum and court of the land — "Parliament."

I Beg to Differ . . .

The Great Going-Away Gift

By FRANK LOWE

AT the time it seemed like a great idea. After all, our friend was crazy about Canada. He was going away and what better going-away gift could there be than a large, moose stuffed moose head?

Now I don't know about you, but I have always had a secret yearning for a stuffed moose head myself. When I was a boy practically everybody had one hanging somewhere in the home. But, like so many fine old customs, this one seems to have gone. And now one seldom sees a stuffed moose head hanging in a friend's home. More's the pity.

So, as I always felt a stuffed moose head wasn't something one bought for one's self — it should be a gift — this seemed like the perfect time to satisfy at least half of my long-held dream.

I mean, while I wouldn't actually be acquiring a stuffed moose head of my very own, I at least would be purchasing a stuffed moose head.

It was an exciting shopping expedition. First, one has to find a moose head and that is not an easy chore these days. Many stores, I discovered, got almost hostile when I said:

"What do you mean you don't carry stuffed moose heads? What's the matter — you anti-Canadian or something?"

But he had fine hypothyroid eyes, a swivel jaw line and an almost regis-grin. A fine decoration for any man's home — preferably in the living room, over the fireplace. So the farewell party was held, and the presentation made. Our friend was so overcome with emotion when he saw our gift he was speechless for quite some time. Then he said, his voice husky:

"Gee, thanks fellows. This is what I've always wanted, but never really expected to get. And I am sure my wife will be, ah, well, surprised."

She was, too. I mean, after the party the only decent thing to do seemed to be to help our friend carry his going-away gift home. A stuffed moose head is really a two-man job, when it comes to moving it about.

So we reached his home. The weight of the moose head almost got us, and a couple of times, going up the steps, we tripped. This meant that we didn't have to waken his wife — she was standing in the living room when we and the head arrived.

The stuffed moose head, in fact, inadvertently arrived before us. My friend and I were so exhausted from carrying this thing around that we kind of stumbled as we approached the living room — and the head fell from our hands and skittered across the threshold to come to rest almost at the wife's feet.

She emitted a piercing shriek. Then she said:

"Get that thing out of here — right now."

My friend tried to soothe her. "It is a stuffed moose head. A farewell gift from my friends," he explained.

"That a farewell gift?" the wife asked. "What do they give people when they don't like them?"

I tried to help out. "You know how it is," I said. "Most farewell gifts are so mundane, so lacking in imagination. 'You know, a matched set of suitcases.'"

"I would love that," she said. "Or an engraved silver tray."

"I've always wanted an engraved silver tray," she said. "Or a wristwatch," I said.

"My husband has been carrying a $5 pocket watch special for several years now — that's why his pants are so droopy," she said.

At that point the dialogue appeared to have run out. And there was only one thing to do. I palmed the stuffed moose head on the head. "It's back to the hock shop for you, old man," I said, wiping away a small tear. "May your next home be a good one."

So the stuffed moose head and I left. But, as I said, I still think it would have made the ideal farewell gift.

Impressive Economic Climb

Japan Presses Hard To Expand Exports

By FREDERICK NOSSAL from Tokyo

JAPAN'S business leaders today constantly emphasize quality when planning future economic policy. They are dissatisfied with the nation's annual per capita income of less than $1,000 which is still only about a quarter of the U.S. figure.

So much has been said about Japan's phenomenal growth, it is sometimes forgotten that even the giant industries in this country are dwarfs when compared to their U.S. counterparts. In terms of sales, for instance, General Motors is 15 times larger than Hitachi, which is Japan's largest company. There are about 45 companies in the U.S. with annual sales surpassing those of Hitachi.

By 1955, Japan had recovered from the devastation of the Pacific War — assisted greatly by economic and moral assistance from the U.S. It reached pre-war production levels 10 years ago. And its economy has been climbing rapidly ever since.

But accumulation of capital — by individuals, enterprises and government — could not keep pace. Japanese economists admit that their enterprises have tried to expand primarily with borrowed money, and as a result are deeply in debt.

The ratio of owned capital for all companies is only about 20 per cent. Small and medium-sized companies are holding back the modernization of some industries.

An amazing 99 per cent of all Japanese firms (except in primary industry) have less than 300 employees. In the case of trade and service enterprises most have less than 50 staff. Top businessmen argue that reorganization and mergers are vital if Japan is to move from quantitative to qualitative growth.

Although there is an obvious need to increase the ratio of owned to borrowed capital, even the more optimistic Japanese economists do not believe the situation will change rapidly. Japan lags behind industrial countries in public sector investments. The sweeping flyovers and expressways in the cities are highly deceptive.

Less than 10 per cent of the nation's roads are paved, and in the five-year period ending 1972, Japan is investing $18,300,000,000 for road construction. Money also has to be spent by the billions to modernize ports, industrial water supplies, telephone and hydro facilities and airports.

Over the same five-year period, Japan is pouring $3.6 billion into expansion and renovation of ports, and $6.7 billion into reforestation and irrigation schemes.

To pay for these projects, Japan will have to borrow more money abroad, but it also wants to expand its exports. Both exports and imports by Japan are running at around $13 billion annually.

Japanese banks, trading companies and manufacturing firms are now talking of a 10 to 15 per cent increase this year in exports to the U.S. which in 1968 were $4,000,000,000.

Japan wants to increase and upgrade its exports in the hope of improving its foreign exchange reserves which are around $3,000,000,000. This is a low figure when compared with annual imports of $13,000,000,000.

Canada is one nation that will feel the impact of Japan's export drive. Japanese economic specialists insist that their country must improve its adverse balance of trade with Canada.

Japanese manufacturers argue that Canada discriminates unjustly against a number of exports. The items mentioned most often include textiles of different varieties, plastic bottles, footwear, transistor radios and stainless steel flatware. The most recent differences have arisen over Japanese efforts to increase the export of portable television sets.

The Japanese manufacturers demand a much broader quota system, claiming that present Canadian trade policies are restrictive. They say that they are not dumping goods in Canada.

Officials in Tokyo point out that for Japan trade is a simple matter of survival. They say that Japan's fast-growing dependence on imported raw materials accentuates the need for stable export markets. In a recent discussion on Japanese trade problems, economic expert Saburo Okita argued that the supply sources Japan needed for its continued development are so widely scattered throughout the world that the country must think in global terms.

Although it was an Asian land, Mr. Okita argued, Japan ought to develop economically on a world basis. Japanese business leaders also agree on the concept that Japan's import trade has become too large for the nation to shut itself in a shell of regionalism.

For Canada, more aggressive trading policies by Japan have brought large increases in Canadian exports to this country. But the trend also means more problems for several major Canadian industries.

A recent issue of Foreign Trade in Japan, which publishes statistics for use by foreign governments and business houses, shows that the Japanese are pushing exports of machinery and chemical goods to Canada.

The share of heavy and chemical goods advanced from 50.2 per cent of total exports by Japan in 1966 to 53.8 per cent in 1967, the publication says.

"Chemicals, centering on polyvinyl chloride and other man-made plastics, displayed the sharpest gains."

"Among machinery and instruments, impressive gains were registered by household electric appliances such as television sets, transistor radios, tape recorders and electric lamps, and precision instruments, such as cameras."

According to statistics issued by the Japan external trade organization, Japanese exports to Canada last year were valued at $367,000,000, whereas the country imported $660,000,000 worth of Canadian products.

But Japanese resistance to the voluntary quota system was reflected in the small increase in Canadian imports over the previous year. The 1968 figure was only 4.3 per cent higher than 1967 imports, which were worth $623,000,000.

Since the middle of the decade, however, Japan's imports from Canada have risen dramatically. The 1967 total was 40.3 per cent up from 1966. In 1965, Canadian exports to Japan were valued at $357,000,000 — only a little more than half of last year's figure.

Japanese exports to Canada rose by more than 30 per cent annually in 1964 and 1965. The growth rate then began to decline — first to 19 per cent in 1966 and 7.2 per cent in 1967. The 1968 rise of only 4.3 per cent is the lowest in years.

The Japan external trade organization says the slowdown in imports from Canada is the obvious result of the large trade gap. Japan's unfavorable trade balance with Canada expanded from $196,000,000 in 1966 to $258,000,000 in 1967 on a customs clearance basis, according to Tokyo's figures. Last year it was $314,000,000.

Unless 1968 sees a dramatic reversal of trade trends, it will mean that by the end of December, Japan's unfavorable balance with Canada over the three-year period from January, will have passed the billion dollar mark.

However, there are wide divergencies in Canadian and Japanese trade figures because Japan includes the cost of insurance and freight in assessing its imports from Canada, but not when calculating its exports to Canada. Yet the fact that Japanese vessels carry many of the commodities traded by the two countries was worth many millions to the Japanese economy.

This means that Canada tabulates 1968 exports from Japan as only $600,000,000 (as compared with Tokyo's figure of $600,000,000).

Several recurring problems such as the method of calculating import and export figures, restraints demanded by Canada, commodities locked out by Japanese regulations, fisheries questions and other trade matters will be discussed when cabinet ministers from the two countries meet for bilateral talks.

Yet despite inevitable headaches, there will doubtless be general agreement that trade is progressive well.

J. A. Stiles, the minister in charge of commercial affairs at the Canadian embassy in Tokyo, is optimistic about trade expansion in the future. He says it is natural that when trade is so heavy between two nations, there will be areas of disagreement.

The first atomic bomb was exploded 24 years ago today — in 1945 — above the desert near the Alamogordo Air Base in New Mexico. The event remained a closely-guarded secret until after the announcement that the first of two atomic bombs had been dropped on the Japanese cities of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. On Aug. 6, 1945, Hiroshima suffered 60,000 dead and 69,000 injured from a bomb equal in power to 20,000 tons of TNT. Three days later Nagasaki was hit and 39,000 persons were killed.

1821 — The founder of the Christian Science movement, Mary Baker Eddy, was born.

1951 — Leopold III, King of the Belgians, abdicated.

Second World War: Twenty-five years ago today — in 1944 — Gen. Montgomery presented medals to five Canadian members of a parachute battalion. Allied planes bombed Berlin by night; Allied planes bombed Normandy.

Dauntless Trio Went to Moon and Back 100 Years Ago!

An enthralled world watched as three men were shot to the moon from a place in southern Florida.

Armstrong, Aldrin and Collins? No, these "three dauntless explorers" were Michael Ardan, a Frenchman, Captain Nichol, a Philadelphia armor plate maker, and Impy Barbicane, president of the Baltimore Gun Club. They made their trip almost exactly a century ago, and it was all in the imagination of the French master of science fiction, Jules Verne.

Verne's moon mission had its origins in the Gun Club of Baltimore just after the end of the American Civil War. The military-industrial complex of that day, finding itself with no more battles to fight, turned its grief and boredom in the quiet chambers of the gun club, until one day Barbicane, came up with a plan:

"Many long years will go by before our cannons again thunder on a battlefield. We must accept this fact and seek another outlet for our restless energy. . . . If you will understand my plan and do everything in your power to help carry it out, I will lead you in the conquest of the moon, and its name will be added to those of the thirty-six states that form this great union."

"The moon has been intensely studied," Barbicane continued. "Its mass, density, weight, volume, composition, movements, distance, and role in the solar system have been exactly determined. Maps have been drawn of it with a precision that equals or surpasses that of maps of the earth. Beautiful photographs have been taken of it."

"In a word, we know everything about it that the mathematical sciences, astronomy, geology, and optics can teach us. . . . From my incontestable calculations I have reached the conclusion that a correctly aimed projectile with an initial velocity of 36,000 feet per second is sure to reach the moon. And so, worthy colleagues, I respectfully propose that we undertake that little experiment."

So it was that the Baltimore Gun Club set out to conquer the moon. Naturally enough, considering the technology of the day and the composition of the club, they decided to do it by means of a giant cannon, big enough to push a projectile through the earth's atmosphere.

Barbicane's proposal captured the imagination of 25,000,000 Americans (all there were at that time), and the day after his speech, Verne reported, "fifteen hundred daily, weekly, semi-monthly and monthly newspapers took up the matter."

"They examined its physical, meteorological, economical, and moral aspects; they considered it from the viewpoint of civilization and political advantage. They wondered if the moon was a finished world, one that was no longer undergoing any change. Was it like the earth before its atmosphere had been formed? What was the appearance of the side that could not be seen from the earth?"

"Although sending a projectile to the moon was all that had been planned so far, every newspaper saw this as the beginning of a series of experiments. They all hoped that America would some day penetrate the last secrets of the mysterious lunar world, and some of them even seemed to fear that its conquest might upset the balance of power in Europe."

The gun club set to work on the astronomical and mechanical aspects of the mission. They were advised by the observatory in Cambridge, Mass., that the theoretical possibility of the moon feat was established beyond question, and that it was solely a matter of developing enough power to escape the gravitational attraction of the earth.

The observatory said a projectile would eventually become weightless and lose speed before it was picked up by the gravitational attraction of the moon, and for this reason it should be launched 27 hours 13 minutes and 29 seconds before the moon arrived at the point of aim.

The ideal time would be about one year hence, when the moon would be close to the earth as well as perpendicular to the horizon, so that the projectile could be aimed straight up. A concomitant requirement was that a launch site be found no more than 28 degrees from the equator; otherwise the line of fire would have to be at an unfavorable angle.

Suddenly Americans were engulfed in scientific information about the moon; it "penetrated through their eyes and ears," Verne wrote.

"There were some well-meaning but rather dense people who at first could not understand that the same side of the moon is always visible from the earth because the moon rotates once on its axis during the time required for it to circle the earth.

"They were told, 'Go into your dining room and walk around the table so that you're always looking at the centre of it. When you've gone all the way around it, you'll have pivoted once on your own axis, too, because your eyes will have swept past every point in the room. The room is the sky, the table is the earth, and you're the moon!' And they were delighted with the comparison."

While the populace marvelled, the gun club wrestled with the problem of building a monstrous cannon. Money was not an obstacle; contributions came from all over the world and the gun club soon had more than $5,000,000 at its disposal, just about enough "for the work of casting and boring, masonry, transporting the workers and providing them with living quarters in an almost uninhabited region, constructing furnaces and buildings, equipping factories, the powder, the projectile, and incidental expenses."

It was decided to make a cast-iron cannon 900 feet long, sunk into the ground to absorb the shock, and with walls six feet thick and an inner diameter of nine feet. It was to be fired with gun-cotton, which could be compressed into the bottom 180 feet of the cannon, leaving more than 700 feet of bore to direct the projectile on its course to the moon.

The next problem was selection of a site below the 28th parallel. At first the gun club considered conquering Mexico, but then it was noticed that parts of Florida and Texas fell within the required bounds. After a fearful argument in which representatives from the two states nearly came to blows, it was decided to locate the project in Tampa, Florida. No consolation was available to the Texans in Jules Verne's time, and so they were put on a train in Baltimore and sent home.

"The projectile . . . stayed submerged for 17 days and then surfaced with an American flag flying. . . . This was illustration of moon trip splashdown, in Jules Verne's Around the Moon, published a century ago.

The population of Tampa doubled in a day and it was soon named Moon City. A town sprang up at the site of the project. A 500-foot hole was dug, using in mammoth scale tried techniques for digging and encasing wells. One day, from 1200 small furnaces built around the rim, a niagra of molten iron was poured into the hole, and the cannon was cast. It was called the Columbiad.

Initially, the gun club had planned only to send a nine-foot yellow aluminum ball to the moon. A ball this size was considered just big enough to be seen through a telescope when it reached the moon, and thus the gun club could determine whether its mission had succeeded.

But two months before the scheduled firing, along came French adventurer named Michael Ardan, who insisted on riding in the projectile, so that man could see the moon for himself. How would he avoid being dashed to pieces on landing? "What's to stop me from slowing down my fall by igniting properly placed rockets at the right time?"

Soon club president Barbicane and Captain Nichol of Philadelphia, who had been a wretched detractor of the mission, agreed to join Ardan on the flight, mostly to settle an argument as to whether it would work.

A new projectile had to be fabricated to house the travellers. They decided on a 12-foot-high cone-topped cylinder, for greatest stability. In appearance, it "might have been taken for one of those thick pepper-box turrets which medieval architects placed at the corner of fortresses," Verne wrote.

Entrance was by means of a narrow opening which looked like the manhole in a steam boiler. It was hermetically sealed by means of an aluminum plate bolted from the inside. Portholes were fashioned from thick glass so the travellers could see out, and an intricate spring and water pressure system was rigged to cushion them from the initial shock of the firing.

Space was provided for a year's supply of food (after all, the travellers could be resupplied once a year by a projectile of food from Tampa). Potassium chlorate was put aboard for the manufacture of oxygen.

And then the great day came. "Since dawn a vast crowd had covered the plain that stretched out around some hill as far as the eye could see. . . . for a month the greater part of that crowd had been camping around the enclosure. . . . the plain was bristling with huts, shanties, and cabins. . . . every nation on earth was represented there; all the world's languages were spoken at once, as if the days of the Tower of Babel had returned."

Soon "the three explorers arrived to take their places in the projectile. 'It would take a certain amount of time to lower them to it, bolt the steel plate over the opening when they were inside, and remove the cranes and scaffolding from the mouth of the cannon.'"

The count began. "Thirty-eight! . . . Thirty-nine! . . . Forty! Fire!"

"Instantly there was a terrifying, fantastic, superhuman detonation which could not be compared to thunder or any previously known sound. . . . an immense spot of flame shot from the bowels of the earth as from a crater. . . . when the incandescent spot rose to fling the projectile into the sky to a prodigious height, the blossoming flames lit up the whole Florida peninsula. . . . the immense plume of fire was seen from a hundred miles at sea. . . . not one spectator remained standing; men, women, and children were all flattened like grain stalks before a storm."

The great project nearly went awry. The detonation had so disturbed weather patterns that thick clouds burned over the entire southern United States immediately after. They stretched all the way to the Rocky Mountains where a special telescope had been built to observe the projectile.

For 11 days the country was in suspense. But then the air cleared, and the news burst upon the world: the projectile had passed to one side of the moon, had been captured by its gravity, and was now "moving in an elliptical orbit around it."

It was not clear whether the projectile would eventually be drawn to the surface of the moon, so that the travellers could reach their destination, or whether it would remain in orbit.

But friends of the explorers were undaunted: "They'll hear from us and we'll hear from them! I know them; they're ingenious men. . . . they'll find a way, you'll see!"

Indeed, they did. In his second book, Verne tells how the travellers, after orbiting the moon for a few days, came upon the idea of firing the rockets which had been installed to ease their landing on the surface. Ignited at the proper time, these could propel them back into the earth's gravitational field.

And so it was that the crew of a U.S. Navy corvette, patrolling the Pacific off the coast of Mexico, looked up one December night to see "an enormous meteor, ignited by the rapidity of its course and its friction through the atmosphere." The projectile plunged into 20,000 feet of water, stayed submerged for 17 days and then surfaced with an American flag flying. A rescue ship pulled alongside. The space travellers were playing dominoes.

Germany, Japan Next Big Powers

By JOSEPH ALSOP
From Bonn

In Paris, they still talk about General de Gaulle's departure and their own domestic politics. In London, except among the experts, the main topic is the prospects of an early British election. But here in Bonn, serious world problems are the main subjects.

If you have been regularly coming to Europe ever since the end of the Second World War, the reversal of roles seems very curious, indeed.

Until quite recently, the other European capitals looked out upon the world. But Bonn looked provincially inward, even to the point of treating the successive Berlin crises as affairs for Germany's allies to handle, without much German assistance. The change, of course, no more than reflects the underlying facts of power. Britain and France have been falling behind. Germany has been forging ahead — along with Japan, whose success few Europeans have noticed, except the Germans.

Outside the communist bloc or ex-bloc, in fact, the world now has two quite new, very rapidly emerging big powers. The German gross national product for 1969 should pass $145 billion. The Japanese GNP should be well above $160 billion. With barely more than two-thirds of the Soviet Union's population, these two countries, combined already produce nearly as much as the Soviet Union.

Furthermore, the German and Japanese growth rates are far above the lagging Soviet growth rate, as well as being well above other western growth rates. Looking down the road, in fact, Japan may eventually have an economic weight fully equal to the Soviet weight, and West Germany will not be very far behind.

The drearily economic statistics, in fact, conceal a vast potential change in the whole world balance of power. One must still use the words "potential" and "emerging" about the new big powers for a simple but curious reason. Although both are conscious of the enormous new weight that they are acquiring, neither is as yet ready to throw this weight about.

One way or another, of course, their weight will be thrown about in the end. When people acquire weight, it is sure that they will finally use it somehow for their own purposes, and in this respect Germany is considerably more advanced than Japan, where mention of the new Japanese power is still treated as a mile gauche. The turning points for Germany, one may guess, were the invasion of Czechoslovakia, the last great monetary crisis and the decision to begin Soviet-American talks on strategic arms limitation (SALT).

In the monetary crisis, the Germans defiantly refused to reveal the mark, and they made everyone else dance to their tune. The Czech invasion cruelly dispelled a whole series of illusions about Soviet politics, Soviet purposes and the eastern European future. The SALT decision had a more subtle but no less important effect. Previously, the Germans had almost blindly relied on American strategic predominance, which they assumed was overwhelming. When the pre-SALT discussions revealed that the Soviet had managed to eliminate this American predominance, the shock in Bonn was profound.

The Germans are not going to be caught napping again, in the ways that Czechoslovakia and SALT caught them napping.

From Chancellor Kiesinger downward, they talk now with disillusioned realism about the Soviet intention to hold eastern Europe in an iron grip no matter what the cost and even about the possibility of a Sino-Soviet war, which has now been underlined by the temporary but significant rupture of the border talks.

About these and other world problems, in sum, they now take long views, which are also coolly clear-eyed. You could have no greater change from the period, not so long ago, when even the most able Germans virtually refused to have any views at all, except about their own economic revival.

To be sure, the generation of Chancellor Kiesinger, that exceptionally intelligent man, has merely begun to think, but it is not yet ready to act. For another three or four or five years, moreover, the men of this generation will continue to lead Germany.

But the end of the transitional phase is already in sight here, just as the transitional phase at last seems to be beginning in Japan. We now have two emerging big powers.

Catholics Lose Sympathy

Religious Emotions Spark New Violence

By HAROLD MORRISON, from London

The latest outbreak of violence in Northern Ireland—still explosive and unpredictable—springs mainly from deep religious emotions rather than discrimination in civil rights.

It is, for many observers, a case of where the annual "King Billy" parade turned into a Protestant show of power enraging a faction of Roman Catholic youth.

These hardened demonstrators have been criticized by civil rights leaders and Catholic priests. To the extent that actions of these demonstrators may be associated in the public mind with the civil rights movement, public sympathy in the British Isles for the civil rights appeal may be weakened.

This kind of violent reaction, even to the point where an attempt was made to corner and burn Ulster police, may play into the hands of Protestant extremists. Some participated in the numerous clashes but generally most were on the sidelines.

Now the Ulster government accuses these extremists of taking the law in their own hands and plunging in with their own attack against the Catholics. The feeling in Stormont is that the next few days will be critical.

The only immediate solution, as far as the government can see, is to strengthen police vigilance using police reserves which are mainly Protestant. Military forces also are standing by.

But even if peace comes, blemishes will remain. Previous strife was associated with Protestant discrimination against the minority Catholics in voting rights, housing and employment. These issues aroused considerable sympathy on the British mainland and in other parts of the world.

The latest violence indicates, however, that equality in civil and social rights and privileges may not end the periodic ruptures that raise questions about Ulster's economic future. Something more may have to be done to end the deep-rooted Protestant-Catholic hatred that feeds on old history rather than on Ulster's future. The Ulster government may not be able to find the answer though some observers suggest once civil discrimination ends, Ulstermen may find it easier to co-operate.

Selling Climax Nearer?

Markets Retrieve Day's Worst Losses

TORONTO (CP) — After dropping to its low for the year, the market recovered slightly in late trading Tuesday but still closed with a loss. Volume was light.

The industrial index closed at 172.53, down 1.33, after touching its low for the year of 171.55 in the first 2 1/2 hours of trading.

Observers said the market appeared to be attempting a selling climax, following the pattern of New York.

A selling climax is a sharp drop and then just as sharp a recovery in the same day, accompanied by active trading.

An uptrend usually follows a selling climax.

Investors continued to stay out of the market, apparently unsure of its general direction in the immediate future.

Conglomerate Gains Control over Jade

By HARRY YOUNG
Business Editor

A Vancouver conglomerate which among other interests controls the Executive House in Victoria, has become the principal shareholder in what is believed may be the world's largest deposit of jade.

Athabasca-Columbia announced this week it has acquired 55 per cent of the shares of Jade Mines Ltd., which operates a jade property some 60 miles east of Smithers.

Discovered in 1958 by Vancouver housewife Mrs. Win Robertson, the property is producing at a rate of 200,000 pounds of cut jade worth $3 a pound.

CREEK BOULDERS
Mrs. Robertson was led to the geological boulders that jade was area because she read in a usually found where soda granite contacts serpentine rock, and Smithers was such an area.

The jade was first found lying in boulders in a creek, and this led to the discovery of the mother lode in the cliffs above. In the first year the company, then known as Tezzeron Neophrite Co. shipped 38 tons of jade worth more than $200,000 to Mrs. Robertson's home at Cloverdale.

RECENT LISTING
The reserves are estimated at 2,000,000 pounds in large open boulders and possibly some 100,000,000 pounds in open cliff faces.

Jade is listed by helicopter to Stuart Lake where it is barged to Fort St. John for shipment to the international jade market. Athabasca-Columbia, a fairly recent listing on the Vancouver Stock Exchange is also offering for a trucking firm in Alaska and a company manufacturing marine cable.

INCREASED DIVIDEND
The Bank of Montreal announced Tuesday an increase in its quarterly dividend rate of one cent a share.

NOT BURY YET
The after-effects of the tight money-high interest rate situation are not likely to be felt in Victoria until the fall, according to readers of the local barometer.

With a big influx of tourists since the beginning of the school holidays, the city is busy and retail stores report better than average business.

Demand for consumer and commercial loans is reported by the banks to be strong, despite what looks like unrealistic interest rates.

"Most borrowers seem less concerned with the interest rates they have to pay than in the monthly amount of the repayment," said one local banker.

"So long as the monthly amount fits into their budget they don't care very much whether the interest rate is nine or 11 per cent."

RUNNING LOW
He indicated, however, that the banks were running out of money for new loans, and this he felt was the area in which the crunch would first begin to show.

"I would expect to see some slowing down of the economy in late September," he added. "The squeeze is on but it takes a few months before the full effects become visible."

The battle of inflation began in earnest last March. "Once the holiday season is over and new money ceases to come into the area, you will see the difference," he warned.

REJECTION ADVISED
A Canadian investment firm has advised shareholders of Radio Engineering Products Ltd., not to accept a share exchange with Nyrtronics Inc.

Gardner and Company Limited of Toronto says "based on a detailed study of the current position of the two companies we are unable to recommend acceptance of the offer."

Nyrtronics offered 1.41 shares for one share of REP. Gardner says it has a meeting coming up with Nyrtronics at which it will discuss possible amendments to the offer which might enable it to change its recommendation.

Nyrtronics, listed on the American Stock Exchange, is a manufacturer of electronic components.

The bonds are part of a bond financing placement totalling $720,000,000 in U.S. funds, part of which has already been distributed.

A further and final $36,150,000 under the agreement is to be placed in January, 1970.

DEAL IN OIL LAND
Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas has acquired a 50-per-cent share of the Arctic Islands interests of Great Plains Development of Canada.

Great Plains is one of the Panarctic group of companies whose Arctic interests are farmed out to Panarctic.

In return, Great Plains is receiving $9,000,000 cash and a share of Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas working interest in two blocks of exploration acreage, one in Northern Alberta and the other in the Northwest Territories.

Medical Men Hold Lead
OTTAWA (CP)—Self-employed doctors and surgeons again topped the list of taxpayers with the largest average incomes reported in their 1967 income tax returns, the revenue department reported Monday.

They were followed in order by: Self-employed engineers and architects; self-employed lawyers and notaries; self-employed accountants.

Doctors, engineers, lawyers and the other professionals who work as salaried employees are not included in the tabulation but are classed by the revenue department in the large general category of employees.

The department's 1969 book of taxation statistics, compiled from 1967 tax returns, showed 36,509 self-employed doctors and surgeons had average incomes of $27,347 and paid an average tax of $7,324.

Inco

Talks On Ice?

TORONTO (CP)—Some United Steelworkers of America officials Tuesday talked of breaking off contract talks with the International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd., and "going home for a couple of weeks."

Negotiations appeared nearly stalled in an attempt to end a work stoppage at two Inco sites since last Thursday. The stoppage involves 17,200 men at Inco's mines, smelters and refineries at Sudbury and Port Colborne, Ont.

The company clamped down on any comment from its side on progress of the talks.

'NOSE TO NOSE'
"We're meeting and it isn't possible to say much more than that," one company spokesman said.

One official, who declined to be identified, said "the talks are in the stage where they're nose to nose."

Chief mediator W. H. Dickie met with management officials as members of the union team waited for the company to make the next move.

INCREASES WANTED
Murray Colter, director of public relations for the Steelworkers, said the company would have to offer at least $1 in hourly wage increases to get the talks moving again.

The last company offer to be revealed was a 35-cent-an-hour package that included average wage increases of about 7 1/2 cents an hour. It was made a week ago.

NO VIOLENCE
The Steelworkers have not put a price tag on their demands, but have said they seek "the highest rate in Canadian heavy industry," possibly increases of between $1.40 and $1.90 an hour.

The average Inco worker now makes $3.06 an hour.

In Sudbury and Port Colborne, there was no sign of the violence that marked 28 days of wildcat walkouts when the last contract was negotiated in 1966.

It was the first time that any community was reported to have paid more than $1,000 per income taxpayer into federal, provincial and local taxes.

Power Failure

Ship Rescues Hovercraft

HAY RIVER, N.W.T. (CP)—A British-built hovercraft leased to the Canadian government polar continental shelf research project, was rescued during the weekend by a Canadian Coast Guard vessel after it experienced power failure off the Arctic coast.

Jim Rose of Hay River, transport department marine supervisor, said Tuesday the hovercraft became hung up on ice in an area where the Mackenzie River empties into the Beaufort Sea.

VESSEL GIVES TOW
The 46-foot hovercraft was towed 70 miles during the weekend to Pauline Cove on Herschel Island by the Canadian Coast Guard vessel, Ekilak.

after four of the six-man crew were removed by helicopter. The area is about 1,100 miles north of Edmonton.

The hovercraft was the first of the land-sea vessels to navigate on its cushion of air 1,100 miles down the Mackenzie River, longest trip ever made by a hovercraft. The trip took 25 hours running time.

NARROW CHANNEL
Mr. Rose said the hovercraft was towed through a narrow channel along the Arctic coast to Pauline Cove.

"Had the ice closed in we'd have been in a mess," he said. Repair parts were flown in during the weekend to Pauline Cove. The craft is owned by Pacific Hovercraft Ltd. of Vancouver.

Cabinet Committee Studying Land Use
Lands and Forests Minister Ray Williston announced Tuesday that he and four other ministers had been named a cabinet committee to make policy on multiple land use.

Committees and sub-committees consisting of senior civil servants and others will also be formed to make studies and reports on land use in the province, Mr. Williston said.

The other four ministers on the cabinet committee are agriculture Minister Cyril Sheppard, municipal affairs Minister Dan Campbell, recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan and mines Minister Frank Richter.

Mr. Williston said the committee would authorize public hearings on land-use matters as one method of acquiring facts for policy decisions. "Where conflicts in use persist despite general policy directives, the committee shall make recommendations concerning the matters in dispute," Mr. Williston said.

Formation of the committee is along the lines of one recommended by the legislative committee on forestry and fisheries during the last session.

Cards Continue Streak 23 in a Row on Payday

St. Louis Cardinals proved again Tuesday that they are money players, but the catch this year is that they have had to have the money in hand before they go to their best lick.

Continuing one of sports more unusual streaks, the Cardinals won Tuesday to make it 23 consecutive paydays in which they have produced victory.

They get paid on the first and 15th of each month, and they haven't missed showing their appreciation since August, 1967. They even won on one occasion when a holiday delayed their semi-monthly payoff by a day.

Tuesday's victory, an 8-2 rout of Philadelphia Phillies with rookie relief-pitcher Chuck Taylor starting and finishing, was doubly significant. It put the defending National League champions at 47-46, the first time they have managed to get over 500 this season.

Lending a bit more hope to what still seems a lost cause, New York Mets squared their current series with Chicago

Cubs by squeezing out a 5-4 win, a result which left the third-place Cardinals 10½ games behind the Eastern Division leaders.

Al Weiss, a light-hitting utility player, helped disappoint the 38,608 Chicago fans with a three-run homer. It was the first four-bagger of the season and only the fifth in eight major-league seasons for Weiss.

Weiss also singled and scored Mets' first run in the third

Lakers Arrive Hungry

If Peterborough Lakers are to end their west-coast jinx, Victoria Shamrocks officials don't feel it will be tonight when the teams meet at 8:30 p.m. in Memorial Arena.

Lakers, runaway leaders in the Eastern Lacrosse Association, have lost to Coquitlam Adanacs and Vancouver Carlings so far on their Western trip. Added to their four losses last season here in the National Association that makes it 0-6 for the Easterners.

A change of attitude is the reason given by president Keith Dorman and coach Tom Druce for new hope.

Ranjit Dillon appeared out of his slump in practice Monday with a hustling effort, while Bill Munroe has become a leader in the dressing room with his chatter since rejoining the club for the last two games.

"We're rounding into good shape now," said Druce. "Those two make a big difference to us when they are going right."

They Can Gun

Penny Ridge, five-year-old quarter-horse owned by Danny Hajnal of Victoria, has the lead in practice run against sports car at Sandown Park. The for-keeps race, over 250 yards, will be part of the program of quarter-horse racing at Sandown scheduled for July 31. An added feature will be a race between Hajnal's Bar Whip and horse owned by J. Oliver of Spokane, first to accept Hajnal's challenge to race Bar Whip against any quarter-horse in North America. Twenty horses, seven from the U.S., five from Alberta, five from Victoria and three from the Mainland, will compete in five-race program. Action is scheduled to start at 7 p.m. (Jim Ryan).

Archery Title Hunt Record-Setting Spree

By KEVAN HULL

Don Jackson of Lindsay, Ont., and Dorothy Lidstone of North Vancouver emerged as the top archers Tuesday as the target events in the Canadian championships came to a close at Macdonald Park.

Each won their Canadian freestyle rounds Tuesday and the overall target championships to earn the first berths on the four-member men's and women's teams which will represent the country in the world championships at Valley Forge, Penn.

NEW BOOK NEEDED

The combined totals of 2160 points for Jackson and 2168 for Mrs. Lidstone are records, and both established records in the Canadian round, which had the record book completely rewritten.

Jackson, nipped by Rosaire Charbonneau by two points in Monday's FITA competition, scored 996 in the Canadian round to break the record by 28 points.

Elwin Hancock of Winnipeg was second with 950 followed by Cliff Allan of Victoria, 934.

Charbonneau, with a 2082 aggregate, Hancock, 2086, and Allan, 2073, complete the men's national team.

STILL ANOTHER

Mrs. Lidstone, who set a record in the FITA competition, took the Canadian event with 1000 points, 70 more than the previous mark, for an aggregate of 2168.

Virginia Parkhurst of West Vancouver again finished second to her North Vancouver rival with 974 points and runner-up aggregate of 2112.

Defending Canadian champion Carol Armstrong of Belleville, Ont., finished third in the Canadian round with 954 points for a 1969 aggregate and a berth on the Canadian team along with fourth-place finisher May Saunders of Haney, 1961.

FAMILY TRIUMPH

The Regina father-son pair of Pete and Rod Thauberger set records in the bare bow division. Pete won the senior event with 892 and Rod took the junior competition with 910 over shorter distances.

Dien English of Merritt set a new mark of 843 in the ladies' bare bow competition with 1000 points.

Wanda Allan of Victoria repeating the feat in the junior bare bow event with an 806 total.

Only 44 Left As Champion Pares Roster

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions of the Western Football Conference have reduced their roster to 44 players. The cuts included important quarterback Sam Byrd who last year led Troy State College of Alabama to the U.S. small college football championship.

Also cut were halfbacks Ross Banister, Bill Cline and Gordie Lund. And lineman Roger Flewelling.

Coach Jim Champion said he is recalling tight end Jim Schmidt, who played last year with Sacramento of the Continental Football League.

Mike Embury greeted relief pitcher Jim Juherville with a two-run double in the bottom of the sixth inning Tuesday to give Gorge Hotel a 2-1 victory over Lake Cowichan in a Senior Amateur Baseball League game at Royal Athletic Park.

The Marylebone pickers were choosing a team to play South Africa there last winter. Dolly was an obvious selection after saving a match against Australia here last summer with a murderous batting display.

After much waffling, the lords of the MCC announced a team without D'Oliveira. It turned out much later that a couple of committee men had been tipped off that South African Prime Minister Vorster had turned thumbs down on having a Negro on the team.

TOUR CALLED OFF

Though Dolly was dropped detestably on playing capabilities, there was a loud scream from British sportsmen. Then the troubles of the MCC multiplied. One of the team fell ill, and the only and obvious replacement was D'Oliveira. Reluctantly, the selectors named him.

This set up more embarrassment. With the money-making tour endangered by the expected ban, it was suggested to Dolly that he just might quietly fade away for the duration. One firm with evident contacts with the South African government offered him about $50,000 to take up a cricket coaching job in that country and thus make himself unavailable permanently to the British team.

NO DICE

Dolly announced that he intended to walk out with the white cricketers at Johannesburg. The South African government, after much manoeuvring behind the scenes, eventually came out and said no. The MCC then screwed up its courage and called off the tour — the first such cancellation on color grounds in history.

The South Africans are due to come to England next year on a test tour. Basil D'Oliveira, OBE, almost certainly would be a member of the British team. There is much sentiment in England for cancelling the tour because of the bad smell left by the Dolly affair. The starched old

MCC is still waffling over it, but indications are that in due time the South Africans will be advised to stay home.

Order of Black Excellence Slams Two Cricket Worlds

LONDON (CP) — Someone connected with passing out decorations staged a shrewd public relations operation in hanging an OBE on Basil D'Oliveira, a slugging cricketer, in the latest Queen's honours list.

DOUBLE EFFECT

It had the double effect of delivering a boot in the pressed flannels to the stodgy committee of the Marylebone Cricket Club, the ruling body of the game, and a rebuke to the apartheid government of South Africa.

Dolly is a Cape Colored from South Africa, a mighty batsman and highly popular in this country where he has been playing pro cricket for several years. He is good enough to play for the British national team in test matches. His problem is that in South Africa he can't play with white men.

This led to a monumental muddle by the MCC late last year.

ALEC MERRIMAN

Vancouver Island recreational explorers will be pleased to learn that the mapping branch of the provincial lands service has just published a land status map of northern Vancouver Island.

The seven color-map shows the development, geography and disposition of Crown lands on the north end of Vancouver Island and adjacent mainland. Of special interest is the road and trail network which has been plotted from aerial photographs and information supplied by B.C. forest service rangers and other sources.

If you are planning a North Island trip this is the map for you.

At a scale of one inch to four miles it shows sufficient detail to follow logging and other roads in the area. It is as up-to-date as you will be able to obtain anywhere, and can be used in conjunction with maps of logging roads which are obtainable from logging companies and at the logging gate, just beyond Gold River, where recreationists enter this new playground which is shared with timber companies during non-operational hours.

Doris Eert's north Island recreational map, which is obtainable at almost any up-Island resort from Campbell River north, is another map travelers in the north Island should have.

The new government map of the north Island completes a five-sheet atlas series covering Vancouver Island and replaces land series maps 2A and 2C, covering southerly and northerly Vancouver Island, respectively.

Relief is shown on the newer maps by contour lines 500-foot intervals. Boundaries of provincial forests and tree farm licences are outlined in purple, and a small key map on the left illustrates the extent of the large reserves. The latest boundaries of the municipalities of Port Alice, Port Hardy, Port McNeill and Alert Bay are also shown.

This is the map for fishermen and hunters who can now drive all the way to Holberg and Winter Harbor on the west coast's Quatsino Sound.

The new map is 92L-1021, Alert Bay (1969) and is ready for distribution now. Other maps in the series are 92B-C — Victoria, 1968; 92E — Nootka Sound, 1967; 92F — Alberni, 1967; and 92K — Bute Inlet, 1960.

They may be placed together to make a complete map of Vancouver Island at one inch to four miles scale... the most detailed Vancouver Island map available today.

A complete one-sheet Vancouver Island contour map, with all roads shown, is also available on a scale of one inch to six miles and may be obtained at a cost of $1.15, plus six cents tax and 25 cents handling charge.

The five status maps cost 60 cents each, plus sales tax and handling charge. They may be obtained from the Director, Surveys and Mapping Branch, Geographic Division, B.C. Lands Service, Room 108, 553 Superior Street, Victoria, B.C. The 25-cent handling charge applies to a mail order, be it one map or any number of maps. And if you want the maps rolled you must say so, otherwise they will be sent folded.

The newly-organized Upper Island Retriever Club in Courtenay put on a first-class dog trial last weekend, even showing a few new angles to the veteran Victoria club, which sent a strong contingent of competitors for the up-Island club's first big show.

For a time it looked as if a Courtenay dog, handled by Howie Ellis, might take top honors in its first appearance in an open stake, although it was just two months out of junior competition. It was right in there with the top three for the first three tests, but was eliminated in a stiff fourth test.

Bob Hartman of Victoria took the open stake with his golden retriever, Angus of Stillrovin. Second was Bruce Scarfe of Vancouver with black Labrador Sheba; third, black Labrador Boomerang of Nascopie, Hunter Smith; Cobble Hill, fourth, Seaside's Black Bomber, Hunter Smith; certificates of merit, Mossbank's Black Hawk, Bill Buchanan, Victoria, and Mossbank's Radar Jet, Sid Tomlin, Victoria.

Qualifying: 1—Fred Wronowski, Vancouver, Black Bomber's Nipper; 2—Seaside's Black Bomber, Hunter Smith; 3—Mossbank's Black Hawk, Buchanan; 4—Midnight 14, Ellis. All are black Labradors.

Marichal Picked For Eighth Time

From Associated Press

A pitching staff of nine which had a combined 101-51 record after Sunday's play has been chosen by manager Red Schoendienst to represent the National League in Tuesday's major-league all-star game.

Heading the list is Juan Marichal of the San Francisco Giants, who is making his eighth appearance in the mid-summer baseball test between the two leagues.

The veteran right-hander pitched 16 innings in seven previous games, allowing only seven hits and compiling an 0.56 earned-run average.

IMPRESSIVE CREW
Despite that record and Marichal's 11-3 performance this season, the toughest job Schoendienst will have might be in deciding who to start.

In addition to Marichal he can pick from Tom Seaver and Jerry Rouseman of New York Mets, Bob Gibson and Steve Carlton of St. Louis Cardinals, Phil Niekro of Atlanta Braves, Larry Dierker of Houston Astros, Bill Singer of Los Angeles Dodgers and Grant Jackson of Philadelphia Phillies.

It is the first all-star appearance for Niekro, Dierker, Singer and Jackson. Gibson, allowing one earned run in six innings, has been chosen five times previously. Seaver is making his third appearance in three major-league seasons and Carlton and Rouseman were chosen for the second time.

Right-hander Mel Stottlemyre of New York Yankees and left-hander Sam McDowell of Cleveland Indians are the all-star veterans of the American League; staff, both chosen for the fourth time.

Also on the staff selected by manager Mayo Smith are Dave McNally, Baltimore Orioles' unbeaten left-hander, Denny McLain and Mickey Lolich of Detroit Tigers, Ray O'Fall of Boston Red Sox, John "Blue Moon" Odom of Oakland Athletics and Darold Knowles of Washington Senators.

HARRY YOUNG

One bright spot in this year's Canadian Open championship is that the field will include the new British Open champion.

Tony Jacklin, who won from a distinguished international field last week at Royal Lytham and St. Annes, will be at Pinegrove, Montreal, July 24-27. And with him will be Bob Charles, the New Zealand left-hander who won the Canadian a year ago, and who up until the last few holes at Lytham was running Jacklin neck-and-neck for the British title.

Jacklin, Charles, Robert de Vicenzo, Billy Casper, and of course, George Knudson and Al Balding from Canada compensate largely for the absence of many leading U.S. stars who have opted to play in the Firestone Classic at Akron.

Larry O'Brien, who is a sort of leg man for the Royal Canadian Golf Association and Seagraves in gathering the field for the Open, has run into the most extraordinary series of rebuffs at the hands of the U.S.P.G.A.

He has reported that as far as the U.S. players themselves are concerned, they are all most sympathetic towards the Canadian Open and would have liked to play in Montreal.

O'Brien, however, describes how one sanction after another has been placed on the Canadian event by the U.S.P.G.A.

One of these is that money won at Pinegrove will not be included in the "official money winnings," an important factor for all players because exemptions from qualifying in the following year go to the 60 top money-winners.

Because of this, several players who would have preferred to play at Montreal said they could not afford to do so when they might be raking in valuable "qualifying" dollars at Akron.

This was not all however. It was also decided that only the top four money-makers at Montreal would be on the exempt list for the $250,000 Westchester Classic, which follows the closing events at Akron and Montreal.

Previously, the top 30 in the Canadian open were on the exempt list for the next competition. The full exemption will apply to those taking part in the Akron event.

In addition, the sponsors of the Akron event extended non-qualifying exemptions to another 15 players, most of whom had been in favor of choosing the Montreal event.

Another bone of contention for O'Brien is the case of George Archer, the Masters champion. Archer had told Brian he would play at Montreal, but some time later his wife signed him up for Akron and the sponsors of that tournament would not release him from his wife's signature.

O'Brien says that if the players had been given a free choice of the two events, at least 60 more top ranking U.S. players would have picked Montreal.

In spite of everything, the Canadian Open will survive the current difficulties. Although some famous names are missing, there is still a fine smattering of the men who are international stars.

Jacklin, Charles, Casper, de Vicenzo and the Australians Kel Nagle and Bruce Devlin should be rated along with Knudson and Balding as the favorites. You might be lucky to get five or six to one about any of them.

There is certainly enough talent in this group alone to make it certain that it will take a good score and a good man to win at Pinegrove. What is more, the winner will carry a great deal more prestige than the winner at Akron no matter how official statistics may twist it.

Victoria boys have been playing a notable part in the revival of competitive golf in the district, and it is pleasing to record that there are signs the girls are beginning to show more interest in the royal and ancient pastime.

Last Friday 16 Island girls held a field day at Uplands to start the ball rolling.

It is true the scores may not have been first rate, but the enthusiasm was there. The winner was Barbara Harris of Victoria Golf Club, followed by Dawn Connors of Colwood, Sue Pritchard of Nanaimo, Sue Sherret of Victoria, Jill Smith of Uplands, Maureen Barnes of Cedar Hill and Sue Davis of Uplands.

There's lots of room at the top for British Columbia women golfers, but the path to glory doesn't come easily. It takes hours of practice drudgery and persistence in the face of failure to break through.

Keep it up girls, it can be worth while.

Raiding By U.S. Charged

TORONTO (CP) — The commissioner of the Canadian Football League has charged that the two major United States leagues are raiding teams here.

Jake Gaudaur claimed in an interview that the number of players leaving the CFL for teams in the National and American football leagues is increasing at an alarming rate.

BOTH WORRY
He said his U.S. counterpart, Pete Rozelle, also is concerned about the player raids.

There's no doubt in the world that some of these players are being induced to play out their options," Gaudaur charged.

"In my view, it is not legally or morally right for a club to wave money in front of a player and suggest that he jump a legitimate contract. But this is exactly what is being done."

"I can tell you that Pete Rozelle agrees with me on this. And he has already brought our views before his owners."

NO EASY WAY
But developing some type of formula for co-existence may not be easy, Gaudaur said.

"It's important to remember that the player has this basic right to play a year under the option clause of his old contract so he can become a free agent."

We in football brag about it so we'd better not tamper with it.

"Thus the leagues aren't going to get together and make a clandestine deal to stop movement back and forth."

A player in this option year takes an automatic 10-per-cent cut in pay, and Gaudaur thinks U.S. teams are offering some of Canada's top players a cash guarantee to cover that reduction in return to moving to the U.S. the following season.

ITS GROWING
Gaudaur said seven players in Canada became free agents June 1 of last year. And the figures could be substantially higher in the future.

Such Canadian stars as Billy Symons of Toronto Argonauts, Margene Addins and Vic Washington of Ottawa Rough Riders and Terry Evanson of Calgary Stampeders have indicated they may play in the U.S. next season.

BRONCOS NAMED
Gaudaur said the raiding is being done by only a few teams in the U.S. Denver Broncos of the AFL, for example, had six players on their training camp roster who played in Canada last year—Pete Liske, Calgary Stampeders; Billy Ray Lockie, Sted Page and Bob Richardson, Hamilton Tiger-Cats, and Phil Brady and Bob Paremora, Montreal Alouettes.

Walker drove in Haldane with a single and scored on a single by Roy St. Denis to account for both runs in the third inning.

Glen Bullen came on at that point for Molsons and struck out seven batters in a four and one-third inning relief role.

Moore got a 3-1 victory over the Montreal Expos at St. Louis, Mo., on Tuesday.

On Ailing List

Hopes of Detroit Tigers, already slim, took another reduction Tuesday with the announcement that ace-right-hander Denny McLain may be out of action for two weeks.

McLain, a 31-game winner last season and 13-5 this season, is being treated for phlebitis. It's his left arm but he will have to remain inactive until it has been cleared up.

LAST WHIRL
Lance Gibbs added four runs until caught by Alton Knott off Brown. Then Graham Shillingford joined Findlay to speed up the scoring rate with defiant running of lightning singles.

TURNING POINT
Victory was set up during the last 30 minutes Monday evening when England grabbed four wickets for nine runs in a dramatic spell with the West Indies apparently heading for victory.

Runners-Up Blanked By Luckies
Bob Haldane blanked second-place Molsons on five hits Tuesday at Central Park to pace Luckies to a 3-0 victory in Major Men's Softball League action.

Haldane registered only two strikeouts but had good control and did not permit a runner past second base.

Indies Loses Series

LEEDS, England (AP) — England won the third cricket test against the West Indies by 30 runs Tuesday and took the three-match series with two wins and a draw.

West Indies started the day 240 runs for seven wickets and needed 63 for victory.

WISE CHOICE
England skipper Ray Illingworth decided to take the new ball and opened with speed men John Snow and David Brown.

The eighth wicket pair, Van Holder and Mike Findlay, looked uneasy but scored with occasional singles until Holder was out for 13, fumbling a catch to Phil Sharpe off Brown. The stand had added 23.

Dryden Goes To Nationals

TORONTO (CP) — Goal-tender Ken Dryden of Toronto Tuesday signed a three-year contract to play with Canada's national hockey team. His services had been sought by Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League.

An outstanding performer with the hockey team at Cornell University, Dryden declined to disclose the financial aspects of the contract. But he said any money received would only cover living and education expenses.

The 22-year-old netminder said he will join the national team in mid-August.

"This way I'll be able to go to law school and also play hockey. International hockey is exciting and then there's the extra kick of travelling to Europe for games."

SEEKS EDUCATION
The Canadians are reported to have prepared a $50,000 contract for Dryden, to be increased to $60,000 if he made the team this year.

Continuing his education was a prime factor behind Dryden's decision.

"Getting my degree and maybe also a masters in business administration is an important motivation, and I also want to play in the Olympics."

"The Canadians thought I could go to McGill law school while playing pro in Montreal. At first I was interested, but when I realized I couldn't combine the two, I decided against it."

Dryden will enroll at the University of Manitoba this fall.

"When the national team moves to Toronto in 1970, I'll switch with them. I was notified today that I was accepted by the Toronto University law school."

Dryden, whose older brother, Dave played with Chicago Black Hawks as a goaltender last season, said he still hopes to play in the NHL some day.

Leaders Get Grand Slam In Easy Win

Forland's blow came with two out in an outburst which was helped by three errors.

Denford's 20 runs came in the fourth and fifth innings. Forland's homer was the first in the league since 1964.

Dryden Goes To Nationals

TORONTO (CP) — Goal-tender Ken Dryden of Toronto Tuesday signed a three-year contract to play with Canada's national hockey team. His services had been sought by Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League.

An outstanding performer with the hockey team at Cornell University, Dryden declined to disclose the financial aspects of the contract. But he said any money received would only cover living and education expenses.

The 22-year-old netminder said he will join the national team in mid-August.

"This way I'll be able to go to law school and also play hockey. International hockey is exciting and then there's the extra kick of travelling to Europe for games."

SEEKS EDUCATION
The Canadians are reported to have prepared a $50,000 contract for Dryden, to be increased to $60,000 if he made the team this year.

Continuing his education was a prime factor behind Dryden's decision.

"Getting my degree and maybe also a masters in business administration is an important motivation, and I also want to play in the Olympics."

"The Canadians thought I could go to McGill law school while playing pro in Montreal. At first I was interested, but when I realized I couldn't combine the two, I decided against it."

Dryden will enroll at the University of Manitoba this fall.

"When the national team moves to Toronto in 1970, I'll switch with them. I was notified today that I was accepted by the Toronto University law school."

Dryden, whose older brother, Dave played with Chicago Black Hawks as a goaltender last season, said he still hopes to play in the NHL some day.

Dead Colwood Woman

Blood Alcohol Count 'High'

Catherine Josephine Munn, who died June 2, had an alcohol content in her blood that is known to have been fatal in several cases, a preliminary hearing was told Tuesday.

Mrs. R. A. Rouen, a chemical analyst for the RCMP laboratories in Vancouver, also supported earlier testimony that the carbon monoxide saturation of Mrs. Munn's blood was below the lethal level.

Mrs. Rouen gave her findings during the second day of the hearing.

Charged with the non-capital murder of the woman is her husband, Lawrence Ernest Munn, 41, of 645 Kelley Road.

Munn was arrested June 2 after his wife died at Goldstream Park campsite.

Munn's defence counsel, Brian Smith, clashed with prosecutor Walter Anderson when it was learned that the prosecution intended to withhold a number of witnesses from the preliminary hearing. He said the prosecution had an obligation to produce all witnesses, not only enough to present a case.

The validity of Mr. Smith's point will be argued Thursday morning.

An RCMP constable told the hearing that Munn was given a breath analysis test shortly after he was taken into custody.

The test showed an alcohol content in his blood of .17 per cent. The constable agreed that .1 per cent was generally considered the point of impairment.

He said Munn was very co-operative.

The hearing will continue Thursday.

Here's How to Find Moonship in Sky

Apollo 11 watchers can find moonship if western sky is clear this evening with aid of this star chart prepared for Victorians by Frank Younger and Horace Draper of Dominion Astrophysical Observatory. If this morning's launch was on time, Apollo 11 will be visible midway between moon and Jupiter, a bright white star to left of and slightly above moon. To position field glasses or telescope, extend and spread right hand with little finger on moon and thumb toward Jupiter. Apollo 11 will be at about thumb-tip.

Apollo 11 Sighting Possible Tonight

By BILL STAVDAL

The live Apollo 11 show will be on the original big screen for Islanders after 9 p.m. today, if all goes well.

If the sky is clear, if the launch is on time, if the flight path is as planned, Apollo 11 will be visible in the western sky through binoculars or telescope.

After tonight it will take a powerful telescope, says Dr. Kenneth O. Wright, director of the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory in Saanich.

Astronomers will be watching the progress of Apollo 11 through their larger telescope, Dr. Wright said. Last spring Apollo 10 appeared as "a little white blob" on its way to circle the moon.

western sky from Victoria just after 9 p.m. Thursday and Friday. Changing positions of the moon and Apollo 11 are shown for the three days.

On each of the three days, Apollo 11 will appear to be approximately mid-way between the moon and Jupiter, a bright white star to the left of and slightly higher than the moon.

At 9:10 p.m. today Apollo 11 is scheduled to be at 361.64 degrees from true north — almost due west. The ship will be 16.85 degrees above the horizon.

At that time, the astronauts will be about 100,000 miles away.

Assuming good viewing conditions, the space ship will be visible until 10:30 p.m., descending toward the western horizon.

Concert Party Booked Up

Park Permission Too Late

An application by Spanish Community Church of the Mennonite Brethren for permission to hold concerts in public parks in Saanich was approved by the parks and outdoor recreation committee Tuesday night despite the opposition of two members.

Committee was told that a young people's group would give the concerts and make contacts with other young people for Christian dialogue. Ald. Edith Gunning and Ald. Leslie Passmore voted against the motion.

"Do we understand that parks would be used for handing out religious literature?" Ald. Gunning asked.

She said she might be in agreement with the group concerned, but it was a matter of principle and she wanted to know what parks would be used, when and how often.

"Other religious groups might want to do the same thing, and I think we should know what is being requested of us," she said.

The committee was told that parks administrator A. E. Richman approved "of the group using the parks with the stipulation that all literature and litter be cleared away after the meetings."

But late Tuesday night, John Baerg, pastor of the church, said it was unlikely that Saanich parks would be used.

The request was for the period from July 5 to 22. Tuesday night's meeting was the first since the request.

Mr. Baerg said the concerts, given by the Valley Minstrels, had been booked into rest homes, Veterans' Hospital, Queen Alexandra Sororium and other places for shut-ins.

He said the five-member group also gave concerts in Beacon Hill Park and Centennial Square, and had been invited to give one at Willow Beach.

"We appreciate the permission Saanich gave us," he said. "We didn't want to use the parks without their permission. But the group leaves next Wednesday and they're pretty well booked up now."

Creek Reclamation

Colquitz Action Decided

Saanich will move "as soon as possible" to begin restoration of Colquitz Creek, the municipality's public works committee decided Tuesday night.

Among recommendations of design engineer Frank Neate approved by the committee are:

● Acquisition of a limited amount of property to complete public ownership of the stream banks.

● An approach to the federal forest research laboratory to ask what is required to obtain its agreement to open its property to the public.

Ald. Edith Gunning said it was time the municipality "moved actively" on reclamation of the creek.

"SOON AS POSSIBLE"

"I think we should have a full report on the question in three months," said Ald. Frank Waring.

"I think we should have it as soon as possible," Ald. Gunning said.

Mention was made of the recent cleanup of the creek banks near Interurban Road by volunteers.

A letter was read from the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association offering further help.

SALMON FRY

Lorne Ebell of the association told the committee that a clean creek could make it possible for the rearing of salmon fry.

"And they would be a tremendous assistance in bringing salmon back to the Victoria waterfront," he said.

The committee decided to write the federal forestry minister regarding Saanich's concern for federal property on the creek at the forestry laboratory and to ask if measures might be taken for the conservation or acquisition of it.

The watershed study was released in February, 1968, and Mr. Neate has been conducting a survey toward its implementation.

Hoist Death

Jury Rules Safety Unheeded

Leslie Calvert, 61, died because of lack of attention to safety regulations, a coroner's jury ruled Tuesday night.

Mr. Calvert died several hours after being struck by a freight hoist at International House, Douglas and Courtney Streets. He had suffered multiple injuries including a severely fractured leg.

CABLE PARTED

In earlier testimony in the four-day inquest the jury was told Mr. Calvert and a fellow plasterer were working in the immediate hoist area while the hoist was in operation. On the seventh lift on the morning of June 25 the hoist cable parted dropping the load about 40 feet, the jury was told.

The jury ruled Mr. Calvert died through lack of due "care and attention to safety regulations which was the responsibility of himself and others."

and said the accident might have been prevented "through improved supervision." The six-man jury took 45 minutes to reach a verdict.

Tower's Tilt Safe

Tower that has both time and inclination leans over Victoria's City Hall. It's no optical illusion. City Engineer J. C. Garnett says tower is "off one or two degrees." Peculiar bent was noticed last year when roof was undergoing repairs. Building and tower were investigated and found to be structurally sound, and no corrective measures are planned, according to Mr. Garnett. Cause is not known.—(William E. John)

Surprise Traffic Plugs Tsawwassen

Bumper-to-bumper traffic was backed up for nearly a mile at B.C. Ferries' mainland terminal at Tsawwassen for most of Tuesday.

Hundreds of travellers sweltered through a delay of two or three hours before they could board a ferry for Vancouver Island.

"We weren't expecting it this early in the week, and we don't know how to account for it," said a B.C. Ferries spokesman at Tsawwassen. "It may be due to the Jehovah's Witnesses meeting in Vancouver, but there is no way of being sure."

No additional ferries were put on the Tsawwassen-Swartz Bay run to accommodate the extra traffic, the spokesman added.

"Monday, the Queen of Sidney was put on to handle the crowds we expected, but it turned out to be a very light day for traffic. Today we didn't expect anything abnormal, and it turned out to be one of the biggest days of the summer," he said.

Although ferries from the mainland were running up to 45 minutes behind schedule, traffic from Swartz Bay was light and the service was normal.

A Lovelier You

Age Won't Halt Blackheads

By MARY SUE MILLER

If it's your idea that only young, oily skins are the target of blackheads, you are mistaken. Large pores attract the pests, no matter what a woman's age. As heat is kind neither to oily skin nor to enlarged pores, both conditions can be worsened in summertime.

Relief measures are more meaningful, once you understand the nature of blackheads. They are triggered in one's youth by overactive oil glands. Excessive oil forms plugs in the pores, which are then darkened by oxidation.

Other than the beauty threat, there are several dangers in blackheads. One is a flare-up of pimples, owing to infection from bacteria always present in plugs and on the skin's surface.

Plugs also stretch and enlarge the pores. At any time of life, enlarged pores are subject to the clog that invites blackheads. It's a veritable treadmill of little black sheep. When the facts are clear, you come to see that not squeezing but cleansing cornerstones treatment—cleansing by soap and water, by steaming over hot water, and by the use of cleansing grains and medicated cleansing lotions. Astringent and medicated masks also help the cleansing cause.

The more thorough the program, the more quickly blackheads are dislodged. Once the skin clears, and not before, the time is right to tone enlarged pores. This is done by daily application of astringent to each pore with a sterile cotton swab.

In Beautiful Balloon

Wedding Ceremony Up, Up and Away

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The bride and groom walked down the aisle, but instead of kneeling at the altar they climbed into a 19th century hot-air balloon.

Singer Florence La Rue, 26, of the Fifth Dimension, and Marc Gordon, 33, the group's manager, were married in the balloon's gondola—50 feet above a hotel parking lot. The theme of the wedding was Up, Up and Away, the group's first big hit record.

"The most unique wedding

I've ever performed," said Rev. Bob Webb, father of composer Jim Webb who wrote the tune.

Attendants held the balloon down as the bride—in an ankle-length gown—and groom stepped in.

As the balloon launched skyward, Webb appeared a bit nervous and read the ceremony quickly.

He laughed when the balloon returned to earth and said he was glad to be down, down and off.

Slim California Woman Silent on Vast Pacific

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Two months ago a slim Southern California woman set sail, all alone, in a 31-foot ketch bound for Japan. Sunday marked the 40th day since anyone had seen or heard from her.

The liner President McKinley reported sighting Sharon Sites Adams June 3 aboard her boat, Sea-Sharp II, in mid-Pacific.

Although she has a radio telephone and a short-wave radio aboard, there have been no calls from the 30-year-old mother of two, and no ship has reported seeing her since. But sailing instructor Al Adams, Sharon's husband, says he's not worried yet about his wife, "one of the best sailing students I ever taught."

He says he thinks it will take her another week or two to reach Yokohama, 6,000 miles from the San Diego harbor she shoved off from, smiling and winking back tears and waving at 500 spectators.

She had supplies for 125 days. "I expect she's cold, wet and very lonesome out there," Adams said. He has been charting her course and following weather reports in the areas where he thinks she has been.

"There have been five or six days when she's had gale-force winds of 40 knots and ships crossing there have reported 20-foot seas," Adams said.

However, he said his wife's ketch was specially rigged for strength.

"In case of a gale she could reduce the amount of sail rapidly. There is also a plastic blister on top of the cabin that lets her stand up and look outside," Adams said.

He said he had instructed his wife to wear her lifebelt at all times and to keep it attached to the boat with a 25-foot line in case she fell overboard.

Mrs. Adams became the first woman to sail single-handed from Los Angeles to Hawaii four years ago. She had learned to sail only five months before the adventure. If her present voyage is successful, she will become the first woman to sail across the Pacific alone.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I cried when I read that letter from the boy whose mother is smoking herself to death. I am a girl 23 and my father is doing the same thing.

Ten years ago Dad got emphysema. He wasn't able to participate in any family activities because he couldn't catch his breath if he had to walk more than a block. He was always on the sidelines. He couldn't dance at weddings or even stand in a receiving line for more than 10 minutes. By 10:00 p.m. he was pooped. I remember Mom rushing him to the hospital at least a dozen times. He'd be blue in the face and have to be put in an oxygen tent. Through all this he still smoked two packs of cigarettes a day even though he knew it was killing him.

Six weeks ago Dad was operated on for lung cancer and now he is dying. He won't be here to walk me down the aisle when I marry in September. He won't have the joy of seeing my children grow up, he is only 50 years old. Ann—awfully young to die when you have so much to live for. It's too late for my dad, but I hope someone else's dad will see this and learn something.—His Daughter.

Dear Daughter: I hope so, too, dear. Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: Please rush this information. We need it right away. In what states can a girl, 15, get married? Can her parents have the marriage annulled if she lies and says she is older? What states will allow a man of 18 to get married? Do they ask at the license bureau if the man has a job? Can he be put in jail if the girl is not of legal age?

Nobody is pregnant so don't quote any laws about that jazz. And don't give us any advice. We know what we want to do. Just hurry up with the answers.—Bliss and Her.

Dear H and H: I am typing as fast as I can, your Lord and Ladyship, and I hope this letter gets to you in time. It gives me great pleasure to inform you that in your state, Illinois, your girlfriend is old enough to marry without parental consent.

As for the other questions, see a lawyer. If you don't know a lawyer, get acquainted with one because from the sound of your letter you'll be needing legal advice before long.

Dear Ann: My husband is a printer at the paper that carries your column, so please don't publish my name or initials. He works from 4 p.m. to midnight and I believe he is involved with a woman who works the same shift. This woman pays my husband $2.80 a day to drive her to work and back. I told him I'd take a $10.00 weekly cut in allowance if he'd stop driving her.

He says I'm foolish and that I have no self-respect. According to him a woman insults both herself and her husband when she shows so little confidence in him. What do you say?—Frister's Wife.

Dear Wife: I say you are fighting a losing battle and using the wrong ammunition. Turn on the heat and knock off the accusations or you will have real trouble instead of just suspicions.

Fun Show Holiday For Musical Star

By JUDY JENKINS

By day she's the everyday housewife, taking care of five children, a kitten and half-a-dozen tiny pet desert mice, but at 8 p.m. six nights a week she turns into the star of a hit musical comedy.

Barbara Desprez is on an eight-week holiday in Victoria with her family, and she and her husband, Roger, are at the Newcombe Auditorium by 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday for the Bastion Theatre production of Salad Days.

Mrs. Desprez plays Jane, the female lead, and her husband is percussionist for the play.

The family moved from their home in Nanaimo to 1143 Leonard for the summer. "We have made it into a vacation, and we're going around seeing everything," she said. "We plan to keep it as easy as possible."

She calls Salad Days a "fun show, where everybody goes out smiling. We're enjoying doing it. It's a very happy troupe."

"Jane is — just fun and silly. The cast is tremendous. Most of them have multiple parts. I have the greatest respect for them. I don't think I could handle more than one," she said. "Stuart Kent, Dorothy Hsieh and Owen Foran—they are the ones with multiple parts. They are fantastic in them."

A tiny woman with a happy

face, she looks like she gets a real kick out of her hobby. "I feel more at home in a comedy. It's easier to lose myself in one," she said.

She and her husband have chosen an apt way to practise their hobbies (theatre and music) — eight years ago they started the Nanaimo Theatre Group.

The group's latest presentation was My Fair Lady — she starred as Eliza and he directed the musical. The musical gave a big boost to attendance at the theatre — "suddenly we're a success," she said.

About 450 people usually turn out for every dramatic production, Mrs. Desprez said. But 1,800 attended My Fair Lady.

Eliza was her favorite role. "It's a woman's dream. It's both comic and romantic, and I had always wanted to play it."

She also played Dorothy in Wizard of Oz, and names that as her second favorite part, but she has no more dream parts. "After Eliza, there's nothing really to wish for. But you don't stop just because there isn't another ideal part," she said.

Although she has often acted in children's plays, her own children "get rather tired of going to see me. I get no praise in my own family."

Mrs. Desprez said. Is anybody in the family following Mom's lead? Well, there's four-year-old Milla. "She started where I leave off," she said. "She's a ham, quite dramatic."

Knock at Boudoir By Admirer Chases Husband

ROME (Reuters) — While one man hammered on the door of a beautiful girl's apartment, another fled down a rope of sheets from the bedroom window — and broke his leg.

The fugitive was the husband, and the pounding on the door came from a man madly in love with his wife, police said.

The husband, Pasquale Forestieri, 37, told police later the man had repeatedly threatened to break into the apartment, kill him and carry his wife off.

Terrified that this was what was going to happen, he made a desperate escape from the window to call the police.

His yell of pain when he fell and broke his leg sent the ardent admirer fleeing.

Tory Critic:

Parliament 'Nuisance' To Liberals

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberal government looks on Parliament as a nuisance, Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary Centre) told the Commons Tuesday as debate continued on contentious time-allocation rules.

He said the proposed Rule 75C, which would allow the government in advance to fix limits on House debates, is an effort by the Trudeau administration to emasculate Parliament.

It would remove from the representatives of the people the right to discuss government legislation at sufficient length to expose weaknesses, said the former defence minister in the Diefenbaker administration.

DOING EVERYTHING
The hotly-contested rule debate, which has helped keep the Commons in session more than two weeks past its scheduled June 27 summer adjournment date, demonstrates that the government doesn't like Parliament, looks on Parliament as a nuisance, and is doing everything to undermine its power, Harkness said.

Another government move in the same direction was the roster system of ministerial attendance in the Commons introduced earlier this session by Prime Minister Trudeau.

THEIR POWER
Liberal back-bencher Hyland Chappell (Peel) proposed that the government and official opposition together have the power to allocate time in Commons debates.

The House is considering three rules proposals. Rule 75A would provide for all-party agreement on debating time limits, 75B for three-party agreement, and 75C for unilateral government allocation of time.

Chappell suggested that 75B be altered to give the government and the official opposition, currently the Progressive Conservatives, the power together to set time limits.

He said that under 75B as it stands, 22 New Democrats and 14 Creditists will be able to join with 154 Liberals to overrule the Conservatives. This totals 190 of the Commons' 264 MPs.

MORE WEIGHT
The 72 Conservatives voting with 154 Liberals totalled 226 and should have more weight, Chappell said it would be

"seldom indeed," under an altered 75B, that 75C, against which the whole opposition has launched a fierce fight, would be invoked. It was mild and had an abundance of safeguards.

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker said Trudeau and State Secretary Gerard Pelletier are responsible for the proposed time-allocation rule.

He said Trudeau had said the government is master of the Commons and that Pelletier "represents the quinquennial of the concept—we are your masters."

Diefenbaker said a adoption of 75C would be the death sentence of Parliament "and that is the philosophy behind it."

SAYS CBC BIASED
He accused the CBC of deliberately not carrying any comment on the rules debate while allowing the "sycophants who praise the government" to have their say.

Module Key to Success

Touchdown, Return Critical

By MARVIN MILES
Colonist Los Angeles Times Service

HOUSTON — Success or disaster will hang in the balance for Apollo 11 Sunday during the last 100 feet of the descent to the moon and again Monday in the first few seconds of the launch back into lunar orbit.

Near touchdown the lunar module could run out of time for an emergency manoeuvre. In case of rocket failure, the descent engine must function perfectly to prevent a crash or a damaging impact and the astronauts' final decision on the safety of the landing site must be correct.

During the launch from the moon 21 hours and 27 minutes later, the first 10 seconds should indicate whether the crew will die on the surface or escape into lunar orbit, although the ascent engine must fire for 438 seconds to reach orbit.

CAUTIOUS TWO HOURS

There will be other critical periods — the cautious two hours and 40 minutes of exploration of the moon's surface and the rocket burn that must thrust the command ship free of lunar gravity Monday night for the return to earth.

But landing on the moon and blasting away from it — particularly the few heartbeats nearest the surface in each phase — will be extremely critical for the Apollo 11 crew. Normally the escape from lunar orbit would be considered as crucial as the launch from the moon, as there is no backup for engine failure in either case.

NO SECOND CHANCE

If the two landing astronauts should be stranded on the lunar surface or the three crewmen locked in orbit around the moon there will be no second chance, no hope of escape, no possibility of rescue.

Astronauts Neil Armstrong and Edwin Aldrin would face death within about 24 hours if they could not launch from the surface. Or they would crash within minutes if their ascent rocket failed during its long burn.

Engine failure at the point of trans-earth injection (after the landing team has returned to the command module) would doom all three astronauts, including Michael Collins. In peril in lunar orbit in a 12-day agony of helplessness.

CRASH INTO MOON

If their service rocket should fail to accelerate them to the necessary speed for lunar escape — a burn of at least 109 to 120 seconds — their command ship would faller, fall back into lunar orbit and perhaps crash into the moon. Despite the identical hazards of engine failure, the de-orbit manoeuvre is regarded as less critical than the lunar launch because of the flawless performance to date of the service rocket that is to hurl Apollo home.

While the ascent rocket in the landing craft also has been tested exhaustively on earth and several times in space, it has yet to burn in a manoeuvre where failure would assure catastrophe for Apollo crewmen.

Landing on the moon is considered critical because this manoeuvre, too, is a first in space-flight experience. It will involve crucial judgment and quick decisions in an extremely hostile environment.

In case of engine failure, Armstrong and Aldrin would abort their approach at any time down to within 100 feet of touchdown by dumping their descent stage and firing their ascent rocket to climb back into lunar orbit.

But this will not be done unless the descent engine (or other vital system) fails or unless the landing-zone terrain is too menacing for a safe touchdown.

DAMAGE TO SHIP

There is always the chance, however, that the descent engine might falter too low to permit reversal and cause a crash or a hard landing that could damage the ship and perhaps maroon its crew.

There is also the possibility that a landing pad could settle on a rock or dip into a crater deep enough to tilt the landing craft and endanger the launch. Engineers say, however, that in the moon's weak gravity (one-sixth of that on earth) the LM could settle into a tilt of 30 degrees and still be capable of launching safely.

But with all the design precautions, all the computer calculations, all the study and thought, the test and training, mission officials such as Christopher Kraft, director of flight operations, know only too well that the unexpected can happen.

"It's going to take some guts," he said.

Micro-Meteorites

Lethal 'Hail' One Danger

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Weather forecast: Continuous hailstorms on the moon, with an outside chance the hail could be lethal.

This hail is micro-meteorites, space dust, tiny bits of rock and metal which, on plunging into the earth's atmosphere, burn up as shooting stars.

Some astronomers estimate the earth gains about 1,000 tons of weight every day from this hail and its burnt ashes.

GRAVITY LESS

The moon, with its smaller gravity tug, probably receives less.

Astronauts Neil Armstrong and Edwin Aldrin are almost certain to be hit by some of these tiny pellets, striking the moon at velocities of seven to 45 miles a second, says Dr. Elbert King, geologist and curator of the Lunar Receiving Laboratory at the Manned Spacecraft Centre in Houston, Tex.

"It is doubtful they will even feel the hits," he says, because their suits have been engineered to protect them. The micro-meteorites will explode on impact, in a fiery-like flash of light. On the airless moon, they will create a no sound.

PUNCTURE POSSIBLE

But a micro-meteorite weighing only 1.25th of an ounce could be catastrophic, punching through the astronaut's suit and puncturing the inner pressure bladder, causing almost instant death.

"We think the astronauts could walk over hundreds of square feet of the moon's surface per day without running such a risk," King says. This confidence comes partly from counting the impacts of micro-meteorites on the windows and skins of spacecraft.

"If they stayed a week, there might be a real risk," says Dr. Fred A. Whipple of the Smithsonian Astrophysics Laboratory in Cambridge, Mass. "Their danger in a short stay is negligible."

Some meteorites apparently are bits of comets, pushed away from the comet's tail by the pressure of sunlight, into an orbit that intercepts the earth and moon. Others are believed to come from the asteroid belt — an orbiting collection of rocks and metal that may once have been a planet that was torn apart in some cataclysm.

Negroes Told

Unity Best Weapon For Space, Hunger

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) —

The administrator of the U.S. Space Agency told civil rights leader Ralph Abernathy Tuesday that America's space program showed that unity could fight hunger problems as well as put a man on the moon.

Dr. Thomas Paine met with Abernathy and about 150 poor blacks, mostly children and their mothers, in a field near the John Kennedy space centre. Abernathy had declared that money spent sending men to the moon would be better used feeding persons on earth.

BUTTON PUSHING

"If it were possible for us not to push that button tomorrow morning and solve the problems you are talking about, we would not push that button," Paine told Abernathy, referring to Wednesday's scheduled launch of Apollo 11 toward the moon.

But Paine said this would not solve hunger problems. He did say science would alleviate poverty situations in the future. "I want you to hitch your wagon to our rocket and tell the people the NASA program is an example of what this country can do," Paine said.

'FOR ALL AMERICA'

"I personally and the members of the space program feel that the space program is a program for all America and we hope it will make a resolution for Americans to band together to fight the problems you are talking about," Paine said.

Abernathy told Paine that the 25 black families he brought here from across the south were not opposing the space shot but were protesting "a distorted sense of national priorities."

Alternately, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, asked that none of the blacks be provided good seats for the launch. Paine immediately issued him 10 "VIP" permits.

U.S. Request to Use Bases Creates Unsolved Mystery

By RICHARD JACKSON
Colonist Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Defence Minister Cadieux has left Parliament with a mystery on his wondering mind.

Why has the U.S. government asked Canada to renew an old and expired agreement permitting the "dispersal" of Strategic Air Command nuclear bombers on Canadian bases?

Beyond conceding that Ottawa had received such a request, the almost-always forthcoming defence minister was unusually and extraordinarily guarded.

IN EMERGENCIES

This much, though, he did say: such bases would be used only in "emergencies."

He added that it would almost have to be a continental North American "emergency."

This sparked speculation that he was hinting of U.S. contingency planning to scatter its SAC fleet to make less of a vulnerable target in case of a surprise attack on North America.

But beyond using the word "contingency" in planning for a "carefully unspecified" "emergency," he did not go under continued questioning.

Then, almost as an afterthought he mentioned another possible use for these requested Canadian "dispersal" bases: war game exercises.

The bases were needed, he said in response to another line of questioning, for fuel, not bomb storage.

FOR FUELLING

A defence department spokesman said later the U.S. request involved only refuelling tankers for SAC bombers.

He cited a Canada-U.S. agreement signed June 20, 1958, which provided four bases in Canada for refuelling the bombers. These were at Frobisher Bay on Baffin Island, Fort Churchill, Man., Old Lake, Alta., and Naino, Alta.

The American maintained fuel tanks there, as well as small staffs. They were seeking "the same sort of thing" now.

The agreement was for 10 years, but it was allowed to lapse in 1963 at the request of the U.S.

The spokesman said he did not know whether the same four bases would be involved in any new arrangement between the two countries. He said he did not know why the U.S. is seeking to renew the agreement at this time, unless it is simply a matter of changing refuelling patterns occasionally.

The SAC mystery intruded itself completely unexpectedly in the daily question period Tuesday concerned almost exclusively with the wheat price crisis.

Conservative leader Stanfield asked, almost casually, whether there had been a request from Washington for access to Canadian air bases.

There had, the defence minister replied.

THAT WAS ALL

And that for the moment was all that was said.

Outside the Commons, in the corridors of the House when the question period ended, Stanfield would say only that he had asked his question after he had "heard something about this matter," but really new little or nothing of it.

He made it sound as if he had picked up nothing more than a rumor.

The defence minister then spent a hard-working 10 minutes being "deliberately" vague under the pressure of a barrage of reportorial questions.

AGREEMENT ONCE

There had been an Ottawa-Washington agreement once, on SAC use of Canadian bases for "dispersal" in case of "emergency."

But when, he would not say. Nor would he disclose when or why it had terminated, or why now, Washington was requesting its renewal.

There had been four of these bases, he revealed, but where across Canada, he declined to tell.

Which government — Liberal or Conservative — had entered into the agreement, or which prime minister, Louis St. Laurent, John Diefenbaker, Lester Pearson or Pierre Trudeau had terminated or allowed it to expire, he would not say.

Among other things he remained mum about where the circumstances, national or international at the time of the signing of the agreement and at the time of its lapsing.

It had gone out of force, he did disclose, "before" Prime Minister Trudeau's "re-examination" of Canadian defence policy which is resulting in a "phase-back" of Canada's NATO troop commitment and the coming 20 per cent reduction in the armed forces.

But now its requested renewal was being considered by the cabinet in the changing Canadian policy on defence.

Had anything been happening internationally that hinted of an "emergency" to come, the defence minister was asked.

There had not, he replied sharply, and this was just about the only point on which he was emphatic.

Finally, replying to the accusation that he was being "vague," he confessed it was so, adding, "deliberately."

Reserves Review Continues

OTTAWA (CP)—Defence Minister Leo Cadieux told the Commons Tuesday the government's review of the role reserve forces will play in Canada's future military policies is not yet completed.

Cadieux told J. Angus MacLean (PC—Malpeque) the government is still consulting with reserve forces associations and these talks are not expected to end before fall.

ABOARD THE USS HORNET (AP) — The only two men to be exposed to the Apollo 11 astronauts after they return to earth say the possibility of contamination by "moon bugs" is negligible.

Dr. William Carpenter, 33, of Lake Cowichan, B.C., and John Hirasaki, 28, of Vidor, Tex., are the National Aeronautic Space Administration men assigned to spend three weeks quarantined with the spacemen.

The isolation is to be sure the Apollo men did not pick up moon organisms that could threaten Earth's inhabitants.

The risk of bringing something back is very small," said Carpenter, the physician who will conduct tests on the astronauts.

"I consider the risk low enough," said Hirasaki, project engineer who helped design the quarantine facility and will operate its systems during the quarantine period.

School Board Study Probable

Wider Use of Computers Foreseen

By BILL STAVDAL

A $2,500 study into the possibilities of expanding computerized data processing was given preliminary approval Monday by the Greater Victoria school board.

The study, to be conducted by the Vancouver firm of Kates, Peet, Marwick and Co., will be finished by Nov. 30.

Trustees, meeting as the school board's education committee, approved the recommendation made by four senior administrative officers. The school board will probably give formal approval at its regular meeting next Monday.

DATA-PROCESSING BUDGET

This year the school district has budgeted $44,840 for data processing. Jobs already done by computer include student scheduling in 14 high schools, circulation control of educational movies, payroll, student master file records and marking of some tests.

Monday's staff report to the trustees envisaged a wide range of additional jobs which might be done by computer. These included budget control statements, staff files, work schedules and numerous kinds of planning forecasts.

The proposed study would outline objectives, clarify jobs to be done and establish requirements.

CO-ORDINATION SUGGESTED

Trustee Cecil Wyatt suggested that the board co-ordinate any system it adopted with data processing systems now being investigated by other school districts.

In other business, trustees learned that enrolment at the Summer Happening program of recreation courses totalled 485 — one more than last year.

Trustees gave preliminary approval to a recommendation establishing a $1-a-month rental fee for school band instruments. The recommendation included a proviso that "no student will be denied participation in the instrumental music program because of inability to pay."

ENROLMENT RESTRICTIONS

The board worried about over its responsibility to high school graduates caught short by new enrolment restrictions at the University of Victoria.

Last month, after receiving its 1969 operating grant from the government, the University of Victoria announced enrolment limits and a priority system giving preference to freshmen with a C-plus (67 per cent) average or better.

The school trustees noted that some Grade 12 students who had been recommended for graduation with a C average had not bothered to write departmental exams which might have raised their averages.

Board chairman Dr. Carron Jameson commented:

"Suddenly and without notification to us, the recommendation has lost its value."

Trustee Allan McKinnon remarked:

"It's a real breach of faith with the students. We told them they would be recommended, they downed oars and coasted through."

Victor Thomson, director of secondary education, said:

"Our students assumed they had entrance to the University of Victoria."

However, Trustee Dr. Victor Rogers took another view. He said any students who passed on low averages had only themselves to blame.

"It's disappointing to children, but it's nothing we could have foreseen or can alter," he said.

Mr. McKinnon added:

"I think this may be the university trying to force the government to give them more money. But there are some very unfortunate kids who got caught in the mixer."

NO ACTION TAKEN

The trustees took no action on the issue.

A planning delay on a proposed district college brought a trustees' offer of co-operation with the department of education.

The school board has asked the government to approve a plebiscite which would transform the Institute of Adult Studies into a district college.

But Education Minister Donald Brocks recently told the board that approval would not be granted before completion of a study of the "articulation" of regional colleges and vocational schools.

AMALGAMATION FAVORED

Mr. Brocks is known to favor amalgamation of vocational schools and regional colleges, and a vocational school is being built near Royal Oak.

All-Canadian Movies Coming Soon

TORONTO (CP)—The first professional all-Canadian movie company, based here, has unveiled production plans for three full-length movies in the next two years.

The new company is Agincourt Productions, which is comprised of LimeLight Productions, a wholly-owned subsidiary of the public relations firm of Marshall Taylor, and Glen Warren Productions.

"We don't say we want all-Canadian because we want flag waving," said John Bassett Jr., president of the company. "If all-Canadian can be done in TV there is no reason why it can't be done in the motion picture industry."

SCIENCE FICTION
The first film to be produced is Flick, a science fiction movie dealing with takeover of a human brain by implanted electrodes operated via remote control.

Filming will start here Aug. 5. It's budget is $300,000. Coming up is the production in 1970 of The Donnelly Must Die, the story of a Lucan, Ont., family of criminals, and Warriors for the Working Day, a Second World War tank-crew story.

FAST ACTION
Signed for lead roles in Flick are Robin Ward, who appeared in Spring Thaw '69; Austin Willis, who has been living in Hollywood for several years, and Sean Sullivan, currently at the Red Barn Theatre in Jackson's Point, Ont.

Bill Marshall, a director and vice-president of the new company, said filming of Flick will last 40 days and involve six leads, 11 principal performers and 200 extras.

"We want to make a film fast," said magazine writer David Cobb, who helped with the script, "edit it fast and get it seen fast so we can say we have a movie, but within this framework to make a movie that is commercial and not crass."

Distribution of the film in Canada will be by Astral Films, a Canadian firm based here. Bassett, son of the publisher of The Telegram, said Flick may also be offered to foreign countries.

Plant Power!

We are hearing quite a bit these days about human rights in this world — the rights to food, shelter and a certain minimum standard of living for all.

In a less urgent sense, plants also demand their rights if they are to enjoy health and security from pests and infection.

Massed together in the garden, most of our plants are far removed from their natural environments. Many are highly bred hybrids and all are growing in a habitat where the normal checks and balances, ordinarily able to hold parasites in check, don't get a chance to operate.

A wild apple tree in nature grows in a mixed population of other trees and plants, and learns to live and thrive in spite of mild attacks of pests and blights, while the same tree growing in an orchard among a hundred other apple trees must be sprayed regularly to survive.

Our habit of planting our apples, our beans and even our roses in masses is contrary to nature and exposes them to epidemic waves of insects and fungus diseases.

We have lots of lethal chemicals for controlling these attacks, but dusting or spraying should really be considered at last resort.

There is a limit to the amount of poison you can apply safely to any plant; moreover, you can't always foresee the end result, for the spray may kill off the pest-consuming predators, leaving us worse off than before.

If our plants are to triumph over their enemies, we must consider their "rights."

First, a plant is entitled to adequate light. Light means food to the plant, for nutrients manufactured in the green leaves through the action of sunlight gives it the energy and vitality to resist the attacks of parasites.

Second, a plant must have sufficient air, both around its topgrowth and in the soil. Good circulation of air through and around the foliage is the most important single factor in the control or prevention of mildew, while wide spacing works against the rapid spread of insect pests in a crop. A whole host of troubles follows in the wake of overcrowding.

Third, a plant is entitled to a congenial soil, for it is hardly fair to ask a plant to grow in soil which is alien. Blueberries can never thrive in an alkaline or limey soil. Beans, sweet peas and garden peas are never at their best in acid soil, or soil devoid of certain bacteria.

The marsh marigold will die in sunbaked, sandy soil, while the roots of the sun-loving potentilla will rot in permanently wet ground. Most of our confifers require the presence of certain beneficial fungi in the soil for their roots to function efficiently.

Either we must choose only those plants best suited to our particular soil and aspect, or we must amend or inoculate our soil to suit the plants we wish to grow.

Fourth, a plant is entitled to a balanced diet, for nutrition is 90 per cent of the battle for health. If we stimulate the plant to excessive leafy growth through the use of nitrogen, we also lower its resistance to pest and fungi attacks.

It may be desirable occasionally to use a "forcing" type of fertilizer — for instance, to green up a lawn in midsummer with ammonium sulphate — but as a general rule, single-element fertilizers should be avoided.

Concentrated chemical fertilizers should always be balanced with enough bulky manure or compost to maintain a good soil mixture.

By adhering to this simple "bill of rights" for our plants, we can expect our gardens to thrive in good basic health.

I wouldn't go so far as to scrap the sprays and dusts, for even healthy plants — and people — are attacked by pests and diseases, but their use should be held to an essential minimum.

JACK SMITH

Timewealth Urged

Dr. Millard C. Faught, a Houston socio-economist, has worked out a plan he calls "split-week living," which he believes can get us out of the urban crisis and the great rat race.

Instead of the present five-day work week and two-day weekend, Dr. Faught advocates a three-day "work end" and a four-day "Weekend." That is, we would all work three days and have four days off.

Split-week living has many implications beyond the mere shortening of the work week and lengthening of the weekend. It would, Dr. Faught says, change the essential quality of leisure.

As it is now, he points out, our leisure is fragmented. We have a lot of leisure time, when you add it up on paper, but in reality it hardly exists. What we call leisure time is so chopped up as to be all but useless. We can chunk some of it into watching TV, or reading, or working in the garden, or going out to dinner or a movie.

But there isn't enough of it in one stretch to permit any really creative enterprise. Our leisure is in bits and pieces. And much of it is killed dead by driving time.

Dr. Faught points out that under his plan the working man would have four days and five nights of uninterrupted leisure. No longer would it be mere time away from work, as we know it now, but a golden opportunity to experiment, to experience, to grow and evolve as creatures of infinite potential.

Dr. Faught has coined a word for this new kind of leisure. He calls it timewealth.

What does a man do with timewealth? First, he can afford to get out of the city and go back to the land. On his three-day work end he will stay in the city, spending the two nights, perhaps, at a dormitory near his job.

Thus he will have to drive to work and back only once a week. He need not live near his job. He can take a place in the country, away from the urban crush. He can get to know his children. Maybe even his wife. At first, Dr. Faught concedes, the divorce rate might go up. There is bound to be some friction with a stranger around the house. But in time the man who has timewealth will be a better father, a better husband, a better citizen.

Meanwhile, the national economy will spin on, more productive than ever, manned by two three-day shifts. We will have a three-day work week but a six-day economy. For years I have advocated a similar plan — the seven weekend week. We would work five days and have two off, as now, but there would be seven weekends instead of one. We would not only have the Saturday-Sunday weekend, but also Sunday-Monday, Monday-Tuesday, Tuesday-Wednesday and so on.

My plan would alleviate weekend glut on our highways and at parks, resorts and other public places. The load would be spread throughout the week, instead of coming like an avalanche on Saturday and Sunday.

There is one flaw. There wouldn't be any Sabbath. But that's no problem. Every day would be Sunday. Clergymen would have to put in a seven-day week, of course. But why not? They've had it pretty soft for at least 2,000 years.

LONDON. (NANA) — "Some people play golf," said Robert Vaughn. "I enjoy studying in the halls of academe." Robert, whom you may remember as Napoleon Solo in The Man From U.N.C.L.E. TV series, has just completed his role in the new Comm. southwest United version of Julius Caesar — he plays the villainous Cassius. "I took my BA and MA when I started the television series," he continued. "Next I shall be taking my exams for a PhD."

But this does not mean Robert will be giving up his acting career, or Hollywood. "But it is a fact that all my films in the last few years — ever since the end of the 'U.N.C.L.E.' series, have been abroad, or out of Hollywood."

"When I finished the series, I went into Ballint — in San Francisco. The Bridge at Remagen, was in Czechoslovakia, until the Russians came in last year and forced us out and into Germany to finish the picture. Then I was in England for The Mind of Mr. Soames with Terence Stamp. I played a brain surgeon and operated on Terence, who was supposed to be thirty years old, unconscious since infancy but a grown man physically."

Robert wouldn't tell me what happens after Terence awakes and is a man in every way. Sounds interesting. I asked the easy-going Vaughn how he had gotten along with Terence, who is a moody man. "He never said a word to anyone all through the picture," he replied, which said everything quotable on the subject.

Half of the Julius Caesar film was shot in Spain — the last part, the battles.

"I didn't have to go there, I'm in the first half of the movie. None of the roles are big. Sir John Gielgud as Caesar ends when I do — well, a moment before." "Tis the perfidious Casca who does in Caesar first. "It's funny," said Robert, "When Gielgud was Cassius for Joe Mankiewicz in 1953, and Marlon Brando was Antony, there was an interesting thing. Marlon spoke his Shakespeare perfectly, except for one word. He stumbled on 'honorable.' He made it 'honorable.' He did 12 takes before they gave up. They could have 'dubbed' it, of course, but they let it go."

Any chance of another TV series? It isn't likely. U.N.C.L.E. was the first one on TV to use the James Bond formula, he reminded me. "Without the sex." But he was very sexy as Solo. "We did it for four years and made 110 segments. It was fun until the middle of the third year, then it began to crack." Robert is one of the few TV stars to survive in films.

After Resignation as Liberal Leader

Smallwood Running Again in 'Greatest' Campaign

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland, saying "my work is not yet done," pledged himself Tuesday to seek re-election as provincial Liberal leader at a party leadership convention in November.

Sporting the bow tie that became his trademark 20 years ago in the fight he led for Newfoundland's union with Canada, he promised "the greatest political campaign that Newfoundland has ever known" to restate his leadership and "party unity."

He will resign the day the convention opens and then re-enter as a leadership candidate, he told a news conference in the provincial cabinet chamber.

The exact date of the convention has not been made known.

The premier's decision appeared to clear the way for a full-fledged fight between Smallwood and his chief leadership rival, ex-cabinet minister John Crosbie.

sition of several of his traditional supporters in question.

Education Minister F. W. Rowe, the only declared candidate besides the premier and provincial party president to Crosbie, said earlier he would resign his candidacy if Smallwood ran. A spokesman for Dr. Jamieson, Liberal MP for

Chretien Tries Fish After Visiting Friend

ALERT BAY — A visit to a friend in Alert Bay brought Indian affairs and its minister Jean Chretien a more cordial atmosphere Tuesday than Monday in Victoria when Indians boycotted his visit.

Mr. Chretien left his official tour at 7 a.m. Tuesday to visit Chief James Sewid of the Nimpkish tribe. Travelling with him were his special assistant Will Mussell and Bob Battle, assistant deputy minister of Indian affairs.

The group flew to Port Hardy and went by car to Port McNeil, where a boat from Nelson Brothers Fishery of Alert Bay met the group. The fisheries boat took them 10 miles into the Queen Charlotte Straits, where they boarded Chief Sewid's seiner, Twin Sisters.

PRIVATE TALK

After a private talk with the chief, who he had met in Ottawa, Mr. Chretien pushed up his sweater sleeves and started to help with the fishing.

During the process of throwing weights into the water to scare fish into the net, the minister wound up covered with scales and knee-deep in fish at one point. Then he switched to the chief's sons' boat to lend a hand.

He went on to Alert Bay and toured the village accompanied by Daisy Neel, Chief Sewid's daughter and a secretary for Nelson's. He studied mortuary poles in the Alert Bay cemetery, where Indians from all the reserves are buried. A tour of the high school and talks with children concluded the visit.

Mr. Chretien's schedule includes a meeting at noon today in Kamloops and then a return to Ottawa.

Telephones Cut Off At Cedar

About 300 residents of Cedar, south of Nanaimo, were without telephone service for most of Tuesday following another incident of vandalism in the B.C. Telephone Workers' strike.

Two cables leading into a connection box at the Cedar cutoff road were cut, one in two places and the other in three places, by what a company spokesman described as "a large pair of diagonal cutters."

A car was reported parked in the area of the damage between 10:30 and 11 p.m. Monday, and police are investigating.

A management splicing crew restored service by 3:30 p.m.

The spokesman said no supervisors had joined the strike.

"There was a total rejection by the supervisors of the union's invitation to join them on the picket lines," he said. "They are more determined than ever to continue to provide the best level of service possible."

Yale Professor Speaks Today

The Negro in Canada will be discussed at a free public lecture at 8 p.m. today at the University of Victoria's Student Union Building by Dr. Robin Winks, professor of history at Yale University.

Next Wednesday's lecture in the summer series will be by former British Columbian George Vincent, who will talk on South America.

Recreation Club Portland-Bound

The Victoria Recreation and Travel Club will make its annual trip to Portland on Saturday. Trip will include sightseeing tour and dog races. Information may be obtained from Jessie Nicholson at 386-2000 or Bill Brooks at 384-6479.

Nixon, Wilson Will Confer

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon will hold informal talks with British Prime Minister Wilson during a stop-over at a British air base Aug. 3, the White House announced Monday.

This will be the last stopping point on the president's round-the-world trip which will take him to the Apollo 11 splashdown in the Pacific, to several countries in Southeast Asia, and to Romania.

Chamber Music Concert Delights UVic Audience

By JOAN MASON HURLEY

Ten first-class artists united their talents to give another splendid recital Tuesday in the Victoria Fair chamber music series.

The audience which regularly attends these very special concerts at the MacLaurin Auditorium has by now come to expect music-making of the very highest order, and programs at once eclectic and unusual.

The first source of pleasure was an oboe concerto in C minor by Marcello. Glenn Danielson's oboe was superb, smooth, effortless, flawlessly played. The obvious delight of the other players—Jack Kessler and Elfreda Gleam, violins, Smyth Humphreys, viola, James Hunter, cello and Hugh McLean, harpsichord, communicated itself to a most appreciative audience.

CHARMING DUET

Audrey Farnell, soprano, sang a cantata, Locke Nur, by Teleman. Part of this was a charming duet in which the voice flirled with a solo flute, superbly played by Conrad Crocker. Hugh McLean and James Hunter also accompanied this work.

Victor Martens, tenor, sang Beethoven's To the Distant Beloved. His voice is a mellow, smooth, beautifully controlled instrument. He conveyed all the passion and tenderness implicit in the text, and was most sympathetically accompanied by Winifred Scott on the piano.

The most exciting work of the evening was the fascinating Trio by Walter Piston, dozen of American composers and once teacher of Leonard Bernstein.

THREE ARTISTS

This was given a superb performance by three Victoria artists who have recorded it with the CBC. Complete empathy exists among Jack Kessler, violin, James Hunter, cello, and Robin Wood, piano.

The artistry of all three musicians was more than equal to the vigor and vitality of this strongly contrapuntal work.

The charm of the pizzicato between the violin and the cello, the lyrical cello solo in the adagio, the poignant violin, the brilliant piano were all most thoroughly applauded by the audience which recalled the players again and again.

TWO NOTABLE

The trio were then joined by Elfreda Gleam, violin, and Smyth Humphreys, viola, for the lyrical Piano Quintet of Caesar Franck. This eloquent, impassioned music with its strong melodic line was magnificently played. Notable were Jack Kessler's exquisite statement of the theme in the slow movement, and Robin Wood's virtuoso piano in the last.

Tonight's concert will be held in St. John's Church at 8 p.m. and will feature Hugh McLean, organ; Sharon McKinley, solo cello; and Audrey Farnell, vocalists.

Greatest Adventure Begins

Apollo trio blasts off

And Away They Go!

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Ready for the century's grandest adventure, space agency officials declared Apollo 11 set for blastoff today to land two Americans on the moon.

"We have had a very smooth countdown and there has not been any problem whatsoever that would scratch us," launch director Rocco A. Petrone said Tuesday as work moved smoothly toward a 6:32 a.m. PDT launching.

Confident and in good spirits for their 250,000-mile journey to the moon, lunar explorers Neil Armstrong, 38, Michael Collins, 38, and Edwin Aldrin Jr., 39, "have shown no evidence of any illness of any sort," said Dr. Charles Berry, chief astronaut physician.

"We are not unduly fatigued and we're ready to fly," Armstrong said earlier.

THROGS WATCH

Hundreds of thousands of people jammed the area, including many who travelled thousands of miles. But if forecasters are correct, they may only see a few moments of history.

Weather predictions are "very favorable" for launch, Petrone said, but after Apollo 11's huge 363-foot-tall Saturn V rocket pierces expected cloud cover at 15,000 feet, "visibility may not be good," he warned.

MANY ELEMENTS

Mission director George Hage told a news conference that failure is always a possibility and people should be prepared for it.

"Anytime you have a space vehicle with many million parts, there are a lot of elements that have to work right," he said. "Nevertheless, project officials have done everything man can do to minimize the chance of failure."

PLAN REVIEWED

The astronauts spent most of Tuesday in crew quarters, reviewing the flight plan and conserving their strength for the demanding eight-day mission to and from the moon.

Aldrin set aside some time to increase his pilot proficiency in a lunar landing craft trainer, while Armstrong talked with his wife Janet.

'CONFIDENCE'

"Everything conceivable has been done to assure our safety," said Armstrong.

"We have high confidence. Otherwise we would not go."

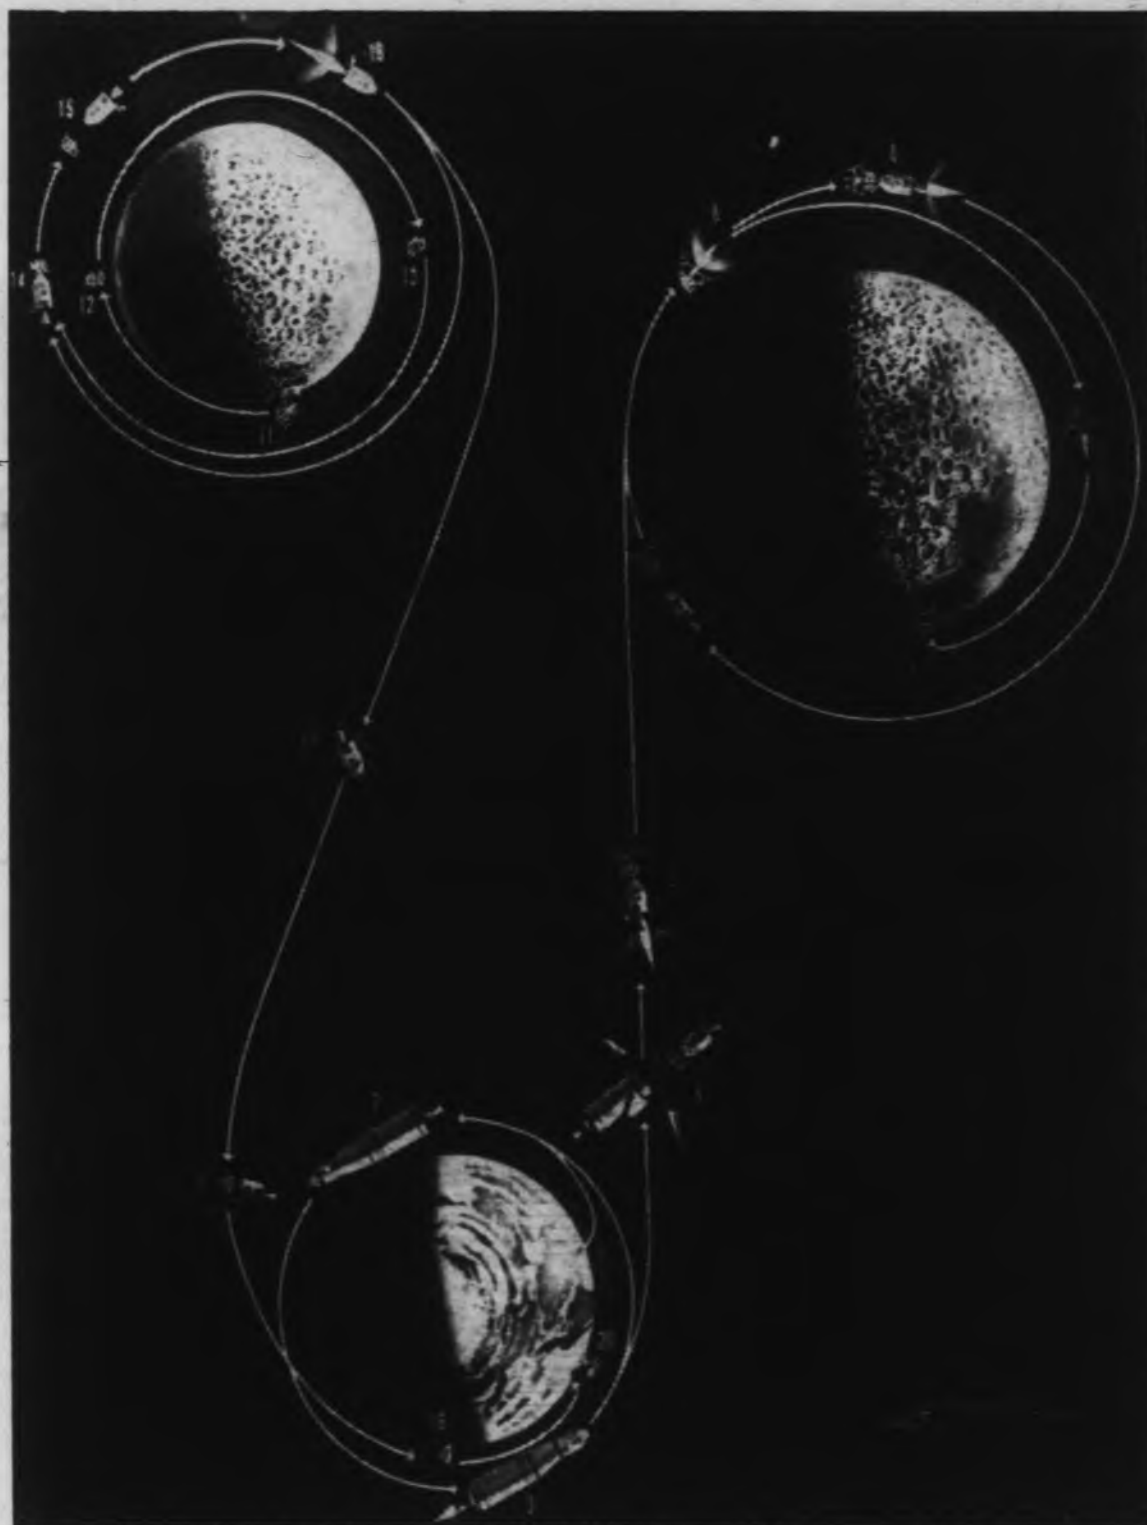

Nearly 1,000,000 persons are expected to witness the blastoff firsthand. They include current and former government leaders, officials from foreign lands, and poor people in mule-drawn wagons protesting that money for the $33,000,000 mission could be better spent helping them.

VIPs ARRIVE

Millions throughout the world will watch on television. Plans for the arrival of VIPs began flying to the area Tuesday.

At the launch pad, crews installed batteries aboard Apollo 11's 36-storey-tall Saturn V rocket.

Latin Mini-War Turning Savage

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Savage fighting and heavy casualties were reported Tuesday on the second day of Central American war between land-hungry El Salvador and the banana-paradise of Honduras. Tanks were reported in action.

The Salvadorean military command announced its forces captured the village of Macaome in a 45-mile-deep thrust into Honduran territory.

The Salvadoreans also reported the capture of the border town of Nueva Ocotepeque.

peque and the surrender of Honduran officers and men after "little resistance."

But a Honduran government announcement said the "struggle has been especially cruel" near Nueva Ocotepeque, with fighting continuing for seven hours at last report.

Honduran medical personnel reported casualties, both civilian and military, were heavy on both sides of the border.

Salvadorean government

sources said unofficially their army is marching in two columns into Honduras, the objective.

San Salvador, the Salvadorean capital, was blacked out Tuesday night in anticipation of an air raid.

Climaxing years of glaring tensions — including a super-heated international soccer football rivalry — the war erupted Monday night when Honduras reported a deep stab into its territory from El Salvador, whose 3,000,000

CP Air Strike Set for Friday

VANCOUVER (CP) — The 1,000 machinists employed by CP Air have voted 92 per cent to reject a conciliation board report and a strike deadline of 11:30 a.m. PDT Friday has been set, union spokesmen Pat O'Grady said Tuesday night.

He charged that CP Air was downgrading air safety by asking for "economy and efficiency of operation."

The union negotiating committee recommended rejection of the conciliation board report July 8. Union officials would not comment on the proposals in the report but the wage offer is believed to be the same accepted by Air Canada machinists after their strike—a 16 per cent boost over 26 months.

CP Air machinists began negotiating May 6 for a 20 per cent boost over one year.

Interest Jumps Again

OTTAWA (CP) — The bank rate has been increased to a record eight per cent effective today, Governor Louis Rasminsky of the Bank of Canada said late Tuesday.

The rate has been raised twice earlier this year, the last time to 7½ per cent from seven on June 11.

He said in a prepared statement the increase is consistent with the desire of the central bank to moderate the expansion of bank credit but that the primary cause for the present action is the high level of external interest rates.

Trudeau Gives Farmers Small Comfort

From CP, UPI, AP

Fast-moving Prime minister Trudeau gave scant comfort to troubled Prairie wheat farmers Tuesday in several encounters during his fence-mending tour of the West.

For the farmers, complaining of slow wheat sales and low farm income, Trudeau had in essence one message:

"Your fight is not with me. I'm not trying to grind the farmer's face in the dust. You will have to face the hard realities of the world grain economy and produce less wheat if you want to find a market for it."

During Trudeau's visit to the Canadian wheat board building in Winnipeg, Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, also on hand, was asked if Trudeau would be discussing the farm income crisis in Western Canada with board officials.

Said Pepin: "The wheat board is not in that business — it is in the business of selling wheat. The wheat market situation is one problem and the farmers' income is another."

Asked to comment on a Washington report earlier in the day that the United States plans to drop its wheat prices below the International Grains Arrangement floor, Pepin said he understood the report was from a department source.

"It is not the official American position."

In the lobby of the building, Trudeau came face to face with Ken Singleton and John Palamarchuk, president and vice-president of the Manitoba Farmers' Union.

Trudeau rejected Singleton's suggestion that the government declare a moratorium on the debts of western farmers, and indicated he did not think much of Palamarchuk's suggestion that the farmers themselves take over operation of the wheat board.

During his Winnipeg visit Trudeau also had a half-hour meeting with Manitoba's new New Democratic premier, Ed Schreyer.

Schreyer later told a press conference the two had discussed farm cash income northern development, the port of Churchill, the Official Languages Act and constitutional review.

It was during a stop at Gimli, 60 miles north of Winnipeg, that Trudeau re-mined farmers of the "hard realities."

"There's too much wheat for the demand," he said. "It's a mistake to think we can sell all the wheat we can produce. I know of no way except that the west will eventually have to grow less wheat. There is a very serious future."

From Glenil Trudeau took a helicopter to Branson, east

Cards Continue Streak 23 in a Row on Payday

St. Louis Cardinals proved again Tuesday that they are money players, but the catch this year is that they have had to have the money in hand before they go their best lick.

Continuing one of sports more unusual streaks, the Cardinals won Tuesday to make it 23 consecutive paydays in which they have produced victory.

They get paid on the first and 15th of each month, and they haven't missed showing their appreciation since August, 1967. They even won on one occasion when a holiday delayed their semi-monthly payoff by a day.

Tuesday's victory, an 8-2 rout of Philadelphia Phillies with rookie relief-pitcher Chuck Taylor starting and finishing, was doubly significant. It put the defending National League champions at 47-46, the first time they have managed to get over 500 this season.

Lending a bit more hope to what still seems a lost cause, New York Mets squared their current series with Chicago

Cubs by squeezing out a 5-4 win. They even won on one occasion when a holiday delayed their semi-monthly payoff by a day.

Al Weiss, a light-hitting utility player, helped disappoint the 38,608 Chicago fans with a three-run homer. It was the first four-homer of the season and only the fifth in eight major-league seasons for Weiss.

Weiss also singled and scored Mets' first run in the third inning.

Trailing, 2-5, the Cubs made their last bid in the eighth inning when Billy Williams and Ron Santo hit consecutive two-out home runs.

Lakers Arrive Hungry

If Peterborough Lakers are to end their west-coast jinx, Victoria Shamrocks officials don't feel it will be tonight when the teams meet at 8:30 p.m. in Memorial Arena.

Lakers, runaway leaders in the Eastern Lacrosse Association, have lost to Coquitlam Adanacs and Vancouver Carlings so far on their Western trip. Added to their four losses last season here in the National Association, that makes it 8-6 for the Easterners.

A change of attitude is the reason given by president Keith Dorman and coach Tom Druce for new hope.

Ranjit Dillon appeared out of his slump in practice Monday with a hustling effort, while Bill Munroe has become a leader in the dressing room with his chatter since rejoining the club for the last two games.

"We're rounding into good shape now," said Druce. "Those two make a big difference to us when they are going right."

ALEC MERRIMAN

Vancouver Island recreational explorers will be pleased to learn that the mapping branch of the provincial lands service has just published a land status map of northern Vancouver Island.

The seven color-map shows the development, geography and disposition of Crown lands on the north end of Vancouver Island and adjacent mainland. Of special interest is the road and trail network which has been plotted from aerial photographs and information supplied by B.C. forest service rangers and other sources.

If you are planning a North Island trip this is the map for you.

At a scale of one inch to four miles it shows sufficient detail to follow logging and other roads in the area. It is as up-to-date as they will be able to obtain anywhere, and can be used in conjunction with maps of logging roads which are obtainable from logging companies and at the logging gate, just beyond Gold River, where recreationalists enter this new playground which is shared with timber companies during non-operational hours.

Doris Eert's north Island recreational map, which is obtainable at almost any up-Island resort from Campbell River north, is another map travellers in the north Island should have.

The new government map of the north Island completes a five-sheet atlas series covering Vancouver Island and replaces land series maps 2A and 2C, covering southerly and northerly Vancouver Island respectively.

Relief is shown on the newer maps by contour lines 500-foot intervals. Boundaries of provincial forests and tree farm licenses are outlined in purple, and a small key map on the left illustrates the extent of the large reserves. The latest boundaries of the municipalities of Port Alberni, Port Hardy, Port McNeill and Alert Bay are also shown.

This is the map for fishermen and hunters who can now drive all the way to Holberg and Winter Harbor on the west coast's Quatsino Sound.

The new map is 92L-1021, Alert Bay (1968) and is ready for distribution now. Other maps in the series are 92B-4, Victoria, 1968; 92E, -1022, North Sound, 1967; 92F, -1023, Alberni, 1967; and 92G, -1024, Port Hardy, 1968.

They may be placed together to make a complete map of Vancouver Island at one inch to four miles scale, the most detailed Vancouver Island map available today.

A complete one-sheet Vancouver Island contour map, with all roads shown, is also available on a scale of one inch to six miles and may be obtained at a cost of $1.15, plus six cents tax and 25 cents handling charge.

The five status maps cost 60 cents each, plus sales tax and handling charge. They may be obtained from the Director, Surveys and Mapping Branch, Geographic Division, B.C. Lands Service, Room 108, 553 Superior Street, Victoria, B.C. The 25-cent handling charge applies to a mail order, be it one map or any number of maps. And if you want the maps rolled you must say so, otherwise they will be sent folded.

The newly-organized Upper Class dog trial last weekend, even showing a few new angles to the veteran Victoria club, which sent a strong contingent of competitors for the up-Island club's first big show.

For a time it looked as if a Courtenay dog, handled by Howie Ellis, might take top honors in its first appearance in an open stake, although it was just two months out of junior competition. It was right in there with the top three for the first three tests, but was eliminated in a stiff fourth test.

Little Leaguers Begin Title Hunt

An evening date with the Ontario champion at Hampton Park on Aug. 12 is the aim of the 13 all-star teams from the Victoria-area Little Leagues when they start the baseball playoff trail this weekend.

The B.C. champion has been drawn against Ontario in the first round of the Canadian championships to be held in Victoria, Aug. 12-16.

The road there is a long one. The local teams must first win their area championships which begin Friday. Then the four area winners meet for the district championship at Hampton Park, July 26-Aug. 1.

The Victoria champion then joins the other six district winners in the B.C. finals at Whalley, Aug. 3-8.

The area and district tournaments are round-robin affairs, the provincial and Canadian finals double knockouts.

Fairfield, American and Hampton Leagues meet in the Area I tournament at Allenby Park with Cadboro Bay, National, James Bay and Oak Bay Leagues in the Area II competition at the National Park at Hillside and Cook.

Area III competitors at Lantz Park are Triangle, Peninsula and Lantz Leagues with Esquimalt, Gordon Head and Lake Hill Leagues meeting in the Area IV tournament at Ambassador Park.

Opening schedules (all games start at 6:30 p.m.):

AREA I (ALLENBY PARK): July 19—Fairfield vs. American; July 20—Fairfield vs. American; July 21—Fairfield vs. American.

AREA II (NATIONAL PARK): July 19—Cadboro Bay vs. National; July 20—Cadboro Bay vs. National; July 21—Cadboro Bay vs. National.

AREA III (LANTZ PARK): July 19—Lantz vs. Peninsula; July 20—Lantz vs. Peninsula; July 21—Lantz vs. Peninsula.

View Royal defeated Esquimalt, 13-4, Tuesday to win the Cobwood and District bantam girls' softball title.

View Royal now competes in the Island championships at Nanaimo this weekend and the winner there will play in the B.C. finals in Vancouver the following weekend.

The Marylebone pickers were choosing a team to play South Africa there last winter. Dolly was an obvious selection after the South African Prime Minister Vorster had turned thumbs down on having a Negro on the team.

After much waffling, the lords of the MCC announced a team without D'Oliveira. It turned out much later that a couple of committeemen had been tipped off that South African Prime Minister Vorster had turned thumbs down on having a Negro on the team.

Though Dolly was dropped ostensibly on playing capabilities, there was a loud scream from British sportsmen. Then the troubles of the MCC multiplied. One of the team fell ill and the only and obvious replacement was D'Oliveira. Reluctantly, the selectors named him.

This set up more embarrassment. With the money-making tour endangered by the expected ban, it was suggested to Dolly that he just might quietly fade away for the duration. Owning firm with evident contacts with the South African government offered him about $50,000 to take up a cricket coaching job in that country and thus make himself unavailable permanently to the British team.

NO DICE. Dolly announced that he intended to walk out with the white cricketers at Johannesburg. The South African government, after much manoeuvring behind the scenes, eventually came out and said no. The MCC then screwed up its courage and called off the hounds—the first such cancellation on color grounds in history.

The South Africans are due to come to England next year on a test tour. Basil D'Oliveira, OBE, almost certainly would be a member of the British team.

There is much sentiment in England for cancelling the tour because of the bad smell left by the Dolly affair. The starchy old

MCC is still waffling over it, but indications are that in due time the South Africans will be advised to stay home.

Twenty horses, seven from the U.S., five from Alberta, five from Victoria and three from the Mainland, will compete in five-race program. Action is scheduled to start at 7 p.m.—(Jim Ryan).

Archery Title Hunt Record-Setting Spree

By KEVAN BULL

Don Jackson of Lindsay, Ont., and Dorothy Lidstone of North Vancouver emerged as the top archers Tuesday as the target events in the Canadian championships came to a close at Macdonald Park.

Each won their Canadian freestyle rounds Tuesday and the overall target championships to earn the first berths on the four-member men's and women's teams which will represent the country in the world championships at Valley Forge, Penn.

The combined totals of 2160 points for Jackson and 2168 for Mrs. Lidstone are records, and both established records in the Canadian round, which had the record book completely rewritten.

Jackson, nipped by Rosalre Charbonneau by two points in Monday's FITA competition, scored 996 in the Canadian round to break the record by 28 points.

Elwin Hancock of Winnipeg was second with 959 followed by Cliff Allan of Victoria, 934.

Charbonneau, with a 2092 aggregate, Hancock, 2086, and Allan, 2073, complete the men's national team.

STILL ANOTHER Mrs. Lidstone, who set a record in the FITA competition, took the Canadian event with 1000 points, 70 more than the previous mark, for an aggregate of 2168.

Virginia Parkhurst of West Vancouver again finished second to her North Vancouver rival with 974 points and runner-up aggregate of 2112.

Defending Canadian champion Carol Armstrong of Belleville, Ont., finished third in the Canadian round with 954 points for a 1989 aggregate and a berth on the Canadian team along with fourth-place finisher May Saunders of Haney, 1984.

FAMILY TRIUMPH The Regina father-son pair of Pete and Rod Thauberger set records in the bare bow division. Pete won the senior event with 892 and Rod took the junior competition with 910 over shorter distances.

Dien English of Merritt set a new mark of 843 in the ladies' bare bow competition with Wanda Allan of Victoria representing the feat in the junior bare bow event with an 886 total.

Louise Van Mael of Gault, Ont., putting all 24 arrows in the gold from 30 yards, set a junior freestyle record of 1004 points.

The championships fell behind time with the result that clout winners were not tabulated Tuesday and the battle clout event was shifted to today at the Wilbert Road range of Victoria Bowman along with the field and flight events.

Action starts today at 6 a.m. The annual meeting will be held at the Dockyard Recreation Hall in the evening.

Mission Chalks Up 42nd Year

Island Mission Camp
Popular With Children

MAPLE BAY — Camp Imadene, the Vancouver Island Sunday School mission, is filled to capacity in its 42nd year of sponsoring summer camps.

Camp Imadene is non-denominational and was founded by Miss Lenore Rice in 1926 who directed the camp until 1935 when she went home to England for a year.

"The camp was small at that time," said H. C. Sheppard, 71, of Duncan, present director.

"Prior to Second World War, it grew and now it is filled to capacity. We are licensed for 106 children at one time and the 65 staff members who range from counsellors, kitchen help to a repair crew.

Photostory by Donna Clements

"The staff volunteer their time, except for Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Taylor, assistant directors, Miss Lois Brammell who reside at Camp Imadene year

The Sheppards have been directors of the camp for 23 years.

Mrs. Sheppard, 65, is a registered nurse.

"My wife and I have always been interested in children and we had been working with them for three years before we took over Camp Imadene in summer camps and in a voluntary capacity in the winter time, working with the Varsity Christian Fellowship."

The camp offers a week by the seaside for children between the ages of nine to 16 during August and July.

"After they turn 16, selected children train as junior counsellors to eventually become senior counsellors," said Mr. Sheppard.

SEVEN CAMPS

"We hold seven week-long camps and the children come under special age groups with all girls, and then all boys. We accept all children from any church group or faith."

"We have approximately 700 from all over Vancouver Island and the Powell River area coming through the camp in July and August. Weekend sessions are sponsored during May and June and the total number of children who will have attended our camp by the end of the season will be over 1,000. Over 100 applications for boys and girls to attend the camp were turned down due to lack of accommodations."

'HAPPY HOLIDAY'

Mr. Sheppard said that although there is a demand to expand the camp, they would not because they felt that if it became too large, they would become out of touch with the children.

"Our main endeavour is to give children a happy holiday and the simple Bible training of our Lord which will prepare them for the life ahead," he said.

Camp Imadene is situated on approximately six acres of land with 1,000 feet of waterfront. A life-guard is on duty during all recreation periods.

"We make the minimum age nine because of the water hazard," said Mr. Sheppard.

'HELPS LIVING'

There are 13 cabins to accommodate 106 children at one time, 10 additional cabins to accommodate the workers, a small infirmary, washrooms and another building containing the living quarters of the Taylors, an office and a dining room.

"I feel summer camp is good for children because they learn to live with other people and this is a very important part of life," said Mr. Sheppard.

"Many have never been away from home before and it helps create a community spirit in some who might otherwise grow up a little selfish. On the whole, I find that the children are very wonderful people to work with."

DAY'S PROGRAM

An example of a child's day at the camp would be rise at 7:30 a.m., breakfast, 20 minutes to clean up the cabin, free time for organized games until 11 a.m. and then morning chapel until 12:30 p.m. which is lunch time. The nine to 11 group go to bed after lunch until 2:30 p.m. while the seniors relax.

The remainder of the afternoon would be devoted to swimming and sports until 5:30 p.m. suppers at 6:30 then would be boating and games until 7:30 p.m. when chapel is held. Juniors go to bed at 8:30 p.m. and the seniors lights-out time is 9:30 p.m.

"We try to keep a busy schedule for the children because it is the only way to keep some children from becoming homesick until they are settled in," said Mr. Sheppard.

Cut Lines Hit Phones

NANAIMO — About 300 residents in the Cedar area south of Nanaimo had their telephone service cut off for most of Tuesday.

Two cables entering a connection box at the Cedar cut-off road were cut with what a company spokesman said "appeared to be made by a large pair of diagonal cutters."

A car was reported parked in the area between 10 and 11 p.m. Monday night. The police are investigating.

The spokesman said management splicing crews had all services restored by 3:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Chretien Tries Fishing
After Visiting Friend

ALERT BAY — A visit to a friend in Alert Bay brought Indian affairs and its minister Jean Chretien a more cordial atmosphere Tuesday than Monday in Victoria when Indians boycotted his visit.

Mr. Chretien left his official tour at 7 a.m. Tuesday to visit Chief James Sewid of the Nimpkish tribe. Travelling with him were his special assistant Bill Russell and Bob Battle, assistant deputy minister of Indian affairs.

The group flew to Port Hardy and went by car to Port McNeill, where a boat from Nelson Brothers Fishery of Alert Bay met the group. The fisheries boat took them 10 miles into the Queen Charlotte Straits, where they boarded Chief Sewid's seiner, Twin Sisters.

After a private talk with the chief, who he had met in Ottawa, Mr. Chretien pushed up his sweater sleeves and started to help with the fishing.

During the process of throwing weights into the water to scare fish into the net, the minister wound up covered with scales and knee-deep in fish at one point. Then he switched to the chief's sons' boat to lend a hand.

He went on to Alert Bay and toured the village accompanied by Daisy Neel, Chief Sewid's daughter and a secretary for Nelson's. He studied mortuary poles in the Alert Bay cemetery, where Indians from all the reserves are buried. A tour of the high school and talks with children concluded the visit.

Mr. Chretien's schedule includes a meeting at noon today in Kamloops and then a return to Ottawa.

Young Engineer Aids
Museum's Growth

By KLAUS MUESTER

DUNCAN — For 25-year-old Patrick Phillips, his new job meant stepping into the past and the present at the same time — and probing into the future.

A trained forestry engineer, he became assistant to Gerry Wellburn, managing director of Cowichan Valley Forest Museum, at the end of April.

Born and raised at Duncan,

Mr. Phillips graduated from Cowichan high school in 1969 and in 1967 he left UBC as a forester.

When a call came from the forest museum to help, he gave up a promising career with management of a large company and accepted the challenge of re-creating logging past, logging present and logging yet to come.

Mr. Phillips commends the establishment of the forest museum through the efforts of Mr. Wellburn and the communities of Duncan, North Cowichan and Lake Cowichan several years ago.

With pioneering spirit, he is ready to assist with the development of the museum facilities now enlarged to 40 acres. The recent acquisition of 15 acres was possible through the co-operation between the three communities, the forest museum society, and the provincial government through the B.C. forest service.

Mr. Phillips said: "I shall have a lot to do with the future expansion of the forest museum. Now we are giving the public a glimpse into the colorful past of the logging industry but the expansion will provide a much greater scope."

"We want to show people, in an interesting manner, the basics of forestry, beginning with the growing of seeds in the small seedlings and eventually bigger trees ready to be harvested."

He said that the general public, even in British Columbia, had only little knowledge of the province's major industry. Not long ago visitors asked to take a canoe along to grow a tree from it at their home.

"Many people just don't know very much about forestry methods and therefore we want to create the life span of a forest in capsule," he said.

To accomplish this, plans call for a display house in the newly-acquired area with models and diagrams, a small working nursery, a tree orchard to demonstrate the selection of tree crops and a planted forest to show intensive management and rotation. A tower in the same area would remind visitors of the great importance of forest protection, he said.

"Should any parent still wish to register their six to 12-year-olds they can do so at the Cowichan recreation centre between the hours of 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. any week day."

Mr. and Mrs. Andrews with their three children are living in Comox.

New Comox Director

Arts, Athletics Form
Theme for Program

COMOX — Comox has a new recreation director and he has already started a summer program which has arts and athletics as its theme.

He is 23-year-old Garry Andrews who replaces Les Siedman who resigned recently.

Mr. Andrews was born in Moose Jaw, Sask., where he was raised and educated. In 1963, he married the former Corie Moffat of North Battleford.

He attended the Rough Riders' training camp in 1967, but missed the season because of an injury. In 1968, he spent part of the football season with the Montreal Alouettes. He played as defensive half-back with both clubs.

Outlining his program, Mr. Andrews said: "Quite often many people have misconceptions about the role of a playground program in the community setting. Opinions range from those who feel it is an expensive baby-sitting service to those who feel a constructive need is being met by the utilization of it. Unfortunately, the minority group is of the latter opinion."

"Perhaps it is a matter of pride or ego gratification, but the Comox recreation commission has decided to call its program the arts and athletics program, rather than the summer playground program as it was formerly known. It is their belief that this more closely approaches the philosophy behind it — that is, hopefully not only will physical needs be met but also social and creative needs as well."

"With this in mind, the program has been constructed in such a way that the children will be organized into three different groups. While one group engages in gymnasium activities, another group will be outdoors, while yet another group will be in arts and crafts. "Each 65 minutes their stations will be changed. It is hoped that one of the three needs mentioned above can be facilitated by each of the stations."

"Should any parent still wish to register their six to 12-year-olds they can do so at the Comox recreation centre between the hours of 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. any week day."

Mr. and Mrs. Andrews with their three children are living in Comox.

Search for Couple
Goes to Police

The search for an elderly couple missing since Saturday in their 34-foot fishing trawler was abandoned at 4 p.m. Tuesday.

The Vancouver Search and Rescue office said it was turning the search for 60-year-old Billy George and his wife over to the RCMP, at Port Alice as a missing persons case.

The couple left Port Alice in their boat, CO2, Tuesday. When they failed to return or make contact by Saturday, RCMP reported them missing and an extensive search began at midnight.

Search and Rescue said about 2,000 square miles of coastal waters from Cape Scott to Kyuquot Sound and including the inland waterways of Quatsino Sound and all other water-

were searched with no results.

Three service aircraft, the Coast Guard cutter, Racer,

RCMP patrol vessels and several local fishing vessels took part in the search.

Recreation For Study

LAKE COWICHAN — Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan is expected to visit Lake Cowichan within the next two weeks to inspect recreational facilities in the area.

Two areas which Mr. Kiernan is expected to visit are Cottonwood Creek Park, Youbou and Gordon Bay Camp, Honeycomb Bay.

Greatest Adventure Begins

Apollo trio blasts off

AND AWAY THEY GO!

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Ready for the century's grandest adventure, space agency officials declared Apollo 11 set for blastoff today to land two Americans on the moon.

"We have had a very smooth countdown and there has not been any problem whatsoever that would scratch us," launch director Rocco A. Petrone said Tuesday as work moved smoothly toward a 6:32 a.m. PDT launching.

Confident and in good spirits for their 250,000-mile journey to the moon, lunar explorers Neil Armstrong, 38, Michael Collins, 38, and Edwin Aldrin Jr., 39, "have shown no evidence of any illness of any sort," said Dr. Charles Berry, chief astronaut physician.

"We are not unduly fatigued and we're ready to fly," Armstrong said earlier. Armstrong and Aldrin spent some time Tuesday in a landing craft trainer before sitting down to a steak dinner.

THROUGHS WATCH
Hundreds of thousands of people jammed the area, including many who travelled thousands of miles. But if forecasters are correct, they may only see a few moments of history. Weather predictions are "very favorable" for launch, Petrone said, but after Apollo 11's huge 367-foot-tall Saturn V rocket pierces expected cloud cover at 15,000 feet, "visibility may not be good," he warned.

MANY ELEMENTS
Mission director George Haze told a news conference that failure is always a possibility and people should be prepared for it. "Anytime you have a space vehicle with many million parts, there are a lot of elements that have to work right," he said. "Nevertheless, project officials have done everything man can do to minimize the chance of failure."

PLAN REVIEWED
The astronauts spent most of Tuesday in crew quarters, reviewing the flight plan and conserving their strength for the demanding eight-day mission to and from the moon.

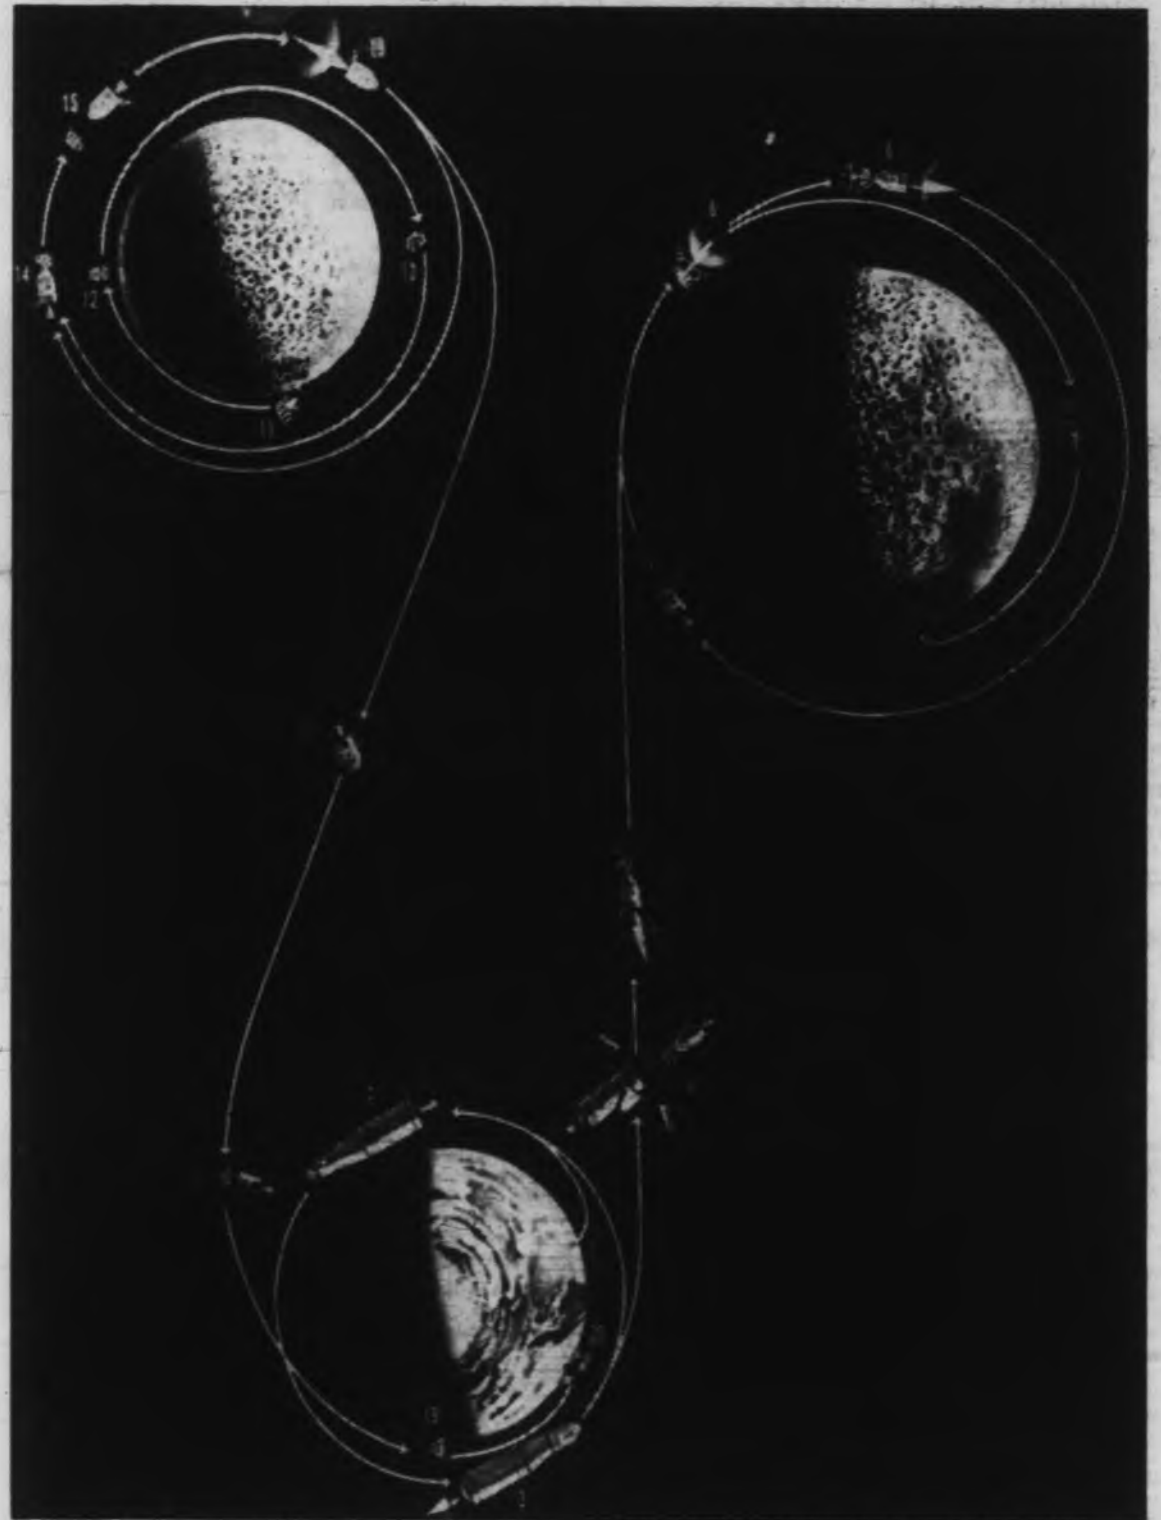

Aldrin set aside some time to increase his pilot proficiency in a lunar landing craft trainer, while Armstrong talked with his wife Janet.

CONFIDENCE
"Everything conceivable has been done to assure our safety," said Armstrong. "We have high confidence. Otherwise we would not go."

Nearly 1,000,000 persons are expected to witness the blastoff firsthand. They include current and former government leaders, officials from foreign lands, and poor people in mud-drawn wagons protesting that money for the $355,000,000 mission could be better spent helping them.

VIPs ARRIVE

Salvador Knifes Into Honduras

Latin Mini-War Turning Savage

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Savage fighting and heavy casualties were reported Tuesday on the second day of Central American war between land-hungry El Salvador and the banana paradise of Honduras. Tanks were reported in action.

The Salvadorean military command announced its forces captured the village of Nacame in a 45-mile-deep thrust into Honduran territory. The Salvadoreans also reported the capture of the border town of Nueva Ocotpeque.

peque and the surrender of Honduran officers and men after "little resistance."

But a Honduran government announcement said the "struggle has been especially cruel" near Nueva Ocotpeque, with fighting continuing for seven hours at last report.

Honduran medical personnel reported casualties, both civilian and military, were heavy on both sides of the border. A Salvadorean government sources said unofficially their army is marching in two columns into Honduras with the capital, Tegucigalpa, the objective.

San Salvador, the Salvadorean capital, was blacked out Tuesday night in anticipation of an air raid.

Climaxing years of glaring tensions — including a super-heated international soccer football rivalry — the war erupted Monday night when Honduras reported a deep stab into its territory from El Salvador, whose 3,000,000

CP Air Strike Set for Friday

VANCOUVER (CP) — The 1,000 machinists employed by CP Air have voted 92 per cent to reject a conciliation board report and a strike deadline of 11:30 a.m. PDT Friday has been set, union spokesman Pat O'Grady said Tuesday night.

He charged that CP Air was downgrading air safety by asking for "economy and efficiency of operation."

The union negotiating committee recommended rejection of the conciliation board report July 8. Union officials would not comment on the proposals in the report but the wage offer is believed to be the same accepted by Air Canada machinists after their strike—a 16 per cent boost over 26 months.

CP Air machinists began negotiating May 6 for a 20 per cent boost over one year.

Interest Jumps Again

OTTAWA (CP) — The bank rate has been increased to a record eight per cent effective today, Governor Louis Rasminsky of the Bank of Canada said late Tuesday.

The rate has been raised twice earlier this year, the last time to 7½ per cent from seven on June 11.

He said in a prepared statement the increase is consistent with the desire of the central bank to moderate the expansion of bank credit but that the primary cause for the present action is the high level of external interest rates.

Trudeau Gives Farmers Small Comfort

From CP, UPI, AP

Fast-moving Prime Minister Trudeau gave scant comfort to troubled Prairie wheat farmers Tuesday in several encounters during his fence-mending tour of the West.

For the farmers, complaining of slow wheat sales and low farm income, Trudeau had in essence one message:

"Your fight is not with me. I'm not trying to grind the farmer's face in the dust. You will have to face the hard realities of the world grain economy and produce less wheat if you want to find a market for it."

During Trudeau's visit to the Canadian wheat board building in Winnipeg, Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, also on hand, was asked if Trudeau would be discussing the farm income crisis in Western Canada with board officials.

Said Pepin: "The wheat board is not in that business — it is in the business of selling wheat. The wheat market situation is one problem and the farmers' income is another."

Asked to comment on a Washington report earlier in the day that the United States plans to drop its wheat prices below the International Grains Arrangement floor, Pepin said he understood the report was from a department source.

"It is not the official American position."

In the lobby of the building, Trudeau came face to face with Ken Singleton and John Palamarchuk, president and vice-president of the Manitoba Farmers' Union.

Trudeau rejected Singleton's suggestion that the government declare a moratorium on the debts of western farmers, and indicated he did not think much of Palamarchuk's suggestion that the farmers themselves take over operation of the wheat board.

During his Winnipeg visit Trudeau also had a half-hour meeting with Manitoba's new New Democratic premier, Ed Schreyer.

Schreyer later told a press conference the two had discussed farm cash income, northern development, the port of Churchill, the Official Languages Act and constitutional review.

It was during a stop at Gimli, 60 miles north of Winnipeg, that Trudeau reminded farmers of the "hard realities."

"There's too much wheat for the demand," he said.

"It's a mistake to think we can sell all the wheat we can produce. I know of no way except that the west will eventually have to grow less wheat. There is a very serious future."

From Gimli Trudeau took a helicopter to Beausejour, east.

Bathtub Race Week

Joint Naval Armada
'Invading' Nanaimo

NANAIMO — From Thursday to Sunday the third annual bathtub race will be responsible for odd happenings throughout the city.

Thursday a mixed armada of Canadian and American naval ships will enter the harbor. At 8 p.m. a parade on wheels will go through town, starting from Harbor Park and later, one of the city's largest-ever fireworks displays will be held in the harbor below Georgia Park.

Hospitality House, sponsored by the Wallace Street Canadian Legion will open that night for all who have joined the Bathtub Society by purchasing membership tickets for a dollar. The same ticket will allow the holder to join other bathtub celebrations.

Friday's highlight will be the Seravmen's King Neptune ball during which 1969's King Neptune will be chosen from about seven entrants, some of whom are from outside the Nanaimo area.

Friday will also mark the opening of registration for bathtubbers in the Shoreline Hotel at 2 p.m. It will be open until 9 a.m. Sunday.

Saturday will start with a street dancing and square dancing along Commercial Street which will be closed from 10 a.m. to noon. The noon Kiwanis will barbeque a whole beef all day and women visitors will get a recipe for the Kiwanis' beef-dip sauce.

At about noon, a water skier will arrive in the harbor bearing a message from Vancouver's Mayor Tom Campbell to be given, as dry as possible, to Nanaimo's Mayor Frank Ney. After the message has been delivered, a group of mayors will test their bathtub skills by racing inside the harbor.

At about 1 p.m. a parade of tubs will go from Departure Bay to Georgia Park, pass a reviewing stand and return to the starting line.

During that time, and for about two hours, Nanaimo Concert Band will present a concert on a barge in the harbor.

The Quarterway Canadian Legion Branch will hold a dinner and dance in the evening and at the Wallace Street branch, there will be a "bathtub bash" in Hospitality House.

The 34 miles long race to Vancouver will be launched at 10 a.m. Sunday. And immediately after the race has started, as soon as foundering tubs have been rescued, there will be a water program lasting about five hours.

It will include water-skiing, canoe challenges and other entertainment. Meanwhile, in Exhibition Park, Mid-Island Auto-Racing Association will sponsor car races and stunt driving.

Riding
Shown

DUNCAN — Another riding class by European equestrian Maj. S. R. Kulesza, formerly of the Polish cavalry, came to an end Sunday evening with a riding exhibition at the fair grounds.

Maj. Kulesza is a riding instructor, author of books on horsemanship and head of the Winnipeg riding academy.

The course at Duncan, held under the auspices of C. C. Carpenter of Echo Valley Farms, Victoria, began July 3. Winners in Sunday's competition were: novice, Gerry Smith; Lindsay Joyce and Kim Bestwick; open, Susan Ashburner.

Three Making Speaking Visit

Three women from North Vietnam in Canada on a speaking tour talked to Voice of Women members at Nanaimo's Credit Union Hall Saturday. Their aim was to present Hanoi point of view. From left are Madame Le Phil Cao, Saigon teacher, Mrs. Dena

Birmingham of Nanose Bay, president of Voice of Women in B.C., Madame Vo Thi The, professor of literature at Hanoi University, Madame Nguen Ngoc Dueg, executive member, Student Liberation Movement. — (Agnes Flett)

Courtenay

Adult Courses
Change Hours

COURTENAY — Assistant adult education director C. N. Peterson has announced first plans for programs in the 1969-1970 school term in the Courtenay area.

Mr. Peterson administers the program with director H. Schellinek who is also principal of G. P. Vanier senior secondary school where most of the courses are held.

Some changes may be expected in a number of night school programs to correspond with the change to the semester system in the school, commencing in September. Previously almost all night school courses operated on the basis of one evening, two hours-per week in each subject, ranging from five weeks for some general interest courses to 30 weeks for academic subjects.

Commencing in September, it is planned to operate most of the academic and vocational courses two nights a week—four hours.

This will make it possible for students to complete their courses by mid-January, and start new courses for the February-June semester.

Instruction and study will be concentrated into two five-month periods, instead of being spread over 10 months as in the past, especially in the academic courses.

History

Married Student
Wins Award

COURTENAY — A young School enrollment picture in married woman student at G. the district continues to show an upward trend, trustees were told.

Figures released by Supt. Ron Lucas in his report to school trustees shows that a 6.9 per cent gain has been registered.

Net enrollment figures include drop-outs and transfers out of B.C.

In kindergarten, a drop of one was registered from the previous year but in Grades 1 to 12, the enrollment was up by 400.

For the preceding school year, the figure was 5.3 per cent.

The average increase in the number of Grade 1 to 12 pupils for a five-year period has been 380 per year.

APPOINTMENTS RATIFIED

One resignation, five releases, two transfers, and 10 appointments were ratified by trustees.

William Brown, recently sworn in as trustee, was appointed to the personnel committee and to the grounds and building committee.

A report on the adult education program was presented for board information and showed a total enrollment of 733. The program covers three main fields — academic, offering six courses; vocational, with nine; and general interest programs with 25 courses.

Crossing Crash
Kills Four

CALGARY (CP) — Four members of a Kamloops family were killed and two others seriously injured in a car-train collision two miles east of here.

Killed when a Canadian Pacific Railway passenger train slammed into a station wagon were George Ball, 40, his wife June, about 40, and two children, four-year-old Christopher and 12-year-old Richard.
